END OF SEASON SALE

Bought your pillows & comforters elsewhere? Guaranteed you overpaid!!!

CAVEAT EMPTOR (BUYER BEWARE)

Don't be misled by advertisements for European goose down comforters at supposedly "SALE PRICES". We'll show you that most of those ads do not represent good values at all. Just because these advertisements are from major department stores - do not be fooled-all down is not alike.

The quality of goose down is measured in fill power (also known as loft). Fill Power is the amount of cubic inches one ounce of down will fill. Our 800 plus Siberian Goose Down will fill between 800 and 850 cubic inches of space. "The Company Store" catalog always lists the fill power of their goose down. Bring in their catalog and we'll generally save you 50% off their prices.

Goose Down Comforters are an investment, with proper care a fine quality comforter will last a life time. Our high quality 100% cotton shells, or tickings, are divided into baffle boxes. The baffle box has a mesh channel separating the top from the bottom of the comforter. The baffle allows the down to give you maximum loft without collecting in one section of the comforter. We do not cater to the consumer that is more interested in price than quality. Our most valuable asset is our customer. We will only sell a product that we believe to be the highest value at the best price. Cheap low quality down should fill garage cans not pillows and comforters. All our goose down pillows and comforters contain 100% goose down even though it is legal to combine 70% down and 30% feathers and label the item 100% goose down. Remember feathers are those things with quills, down is similar to tiny balls of cotton, absolutely no hard quill. Our goose down comforters and pillows are machine washable because they only contain down.

The larger the individual down cluster the higher the fill power. The higher the fill power the better the comforter will insulate thus providing more comfort to you. Since you are spending 1/3 of your life in bed it should be as luxurious as possible. - Why not?

Two Events

Surviving The Summer Replaces Surviving The Winter And A Road Rallye

By Dan Rattiner

Sometimes I think the life of a newspaper editor would make a very good movie. Two events coming up next week support this theory I think. The first is the I Survived the Summer Party which will take place on Thursday, October 12 at the Paradise Cafe. The second is the Bridgehampton Road Rallye.

The I Survived the Summer Party is the successor to the series of I Survived the Winter Parties that I ran in the mid 1980s in what was then a disco and what is now the Bay Street Theatre. Back then, winter was a time of deep contemplation and reflection. The winds would howl, the snow would get halfway up your front door, the stores would close down and once a week or so, a snowplow would come by with your mail.

Since this was such a remarkable contrast to the crowds of summer, it seemed to me, as editor of Dan's Papers, that we ought to celebrate winter's end with a big party. And it should be the hokiest party imaginable, the sort of thing they might hold in northern Canada when winter is finally over, (which I believe is in July.)

To that end, I announced we would hold this party on the first Saturday in April, and we would accept entrants for a Beard Growing Competition, a Chili making competition, and a talent show. (Locals only please.) For the talent show we suggested tap dancers, accordion players, maybe some yodeling hand puppetry. In that first event, of our third annual I Survived the Winter Party, I became seriously ill. Though I survived – I am writing this fifteen years later, no? – I had to have major surgery and was only able to toddle shakily into the event for a summary appearance. Very few of the one thousand people who came to this event, of course, knew of the drama I had been through. People would come over and slap me on the back and say "Hey Dan, survived the winter okay?" You bet, I'd say. I'd think, wow, this is spooky.

The third I Survived the Winter Party, I thought, would be the last. But the fact was that, about ten years later, it was revived by Linda Shapiro, who is a big party coordinator in this community. She'd been to the survival parties in Sag Harbor. And so she held a series of them in Southampton annually at a place called, appropriately, LIFE. If my survival parties had been good, hers were wilder. She had indoor hot tubs (in March), Japanese Sumo Wrestlers and something called the Human Bowling Ball. Proceeds benefitted Southampton Hospital. It was a as I recall, we had one man who entered the talent show wearing a men's undershirt so you could see that indeed he was playing the castanets — to the tune of Tea for Two — with his armpits.

We also had a band. A not very good one as I remember, but with the open bar, by that time we didn't care. We danced through the night under the flickering of the disco lights.

Two years later, just prior to the announcement

South O' the Highway (and North, too)

Many Hamptonites will be in attendance November 9, when Dan Rose and John Utendahl are honored by the Foundation For Ethnic Understanding at the home of Mona Ackerman on Fifth Avenue. Among them are Wendy Wasserstein, Alan and Arlene Alda, Harry Belafonte, Robert DeNiro, Olympia Dukakis, Tova Feldshuh, Marvin Hamlisch, and Rabbi Marc Schneier who is president for the foundation. Co-presenting for the award is Gail Papp, the chairperson for the Joseph Papp Coalition for Racial Harmony. Also at this event, Con Edison will be presented with a Corporate Diversity Award.

Cornelia Foss who has been a cover artist for Dan's Papers will be showing at the Glen Horowitz Book seller on Newtown Lane in East Hampton. A reception is planned for this Saturday between six and eight.

A few hundred yards away at 5:30 p.m., author Dan Rattiner will hold a book signing and reading, if you could call it that, of his new cartoon book Ballet Parking. This is at the East Hampton BookHampton.

There been talk floating around that Alec Baldwin said if George Bush wins the election, he and his wife Kim would move out of the country. We hope they stay, whoever wins.

Having dinner at Steven Johnides and sister Coulas' Old Stove Pub in Sagaponack were Bill Bratton former New York City police commissioner and Ed Burke of Johnson and Johnson.

Producer Robert Barandes is co-producing a Broadway musical revival of Bells Are Ringing scheduled to open in the Spring of 2001. Featured are the songs of Betty Comden, Adolf Greene and Jule Styne. Hamptonites all. Tony Award winner Faith Prince will star in the eagerly anticipated arrival.

Allison and Michael Arlen are hosting a party to celebrate the publication of Roger Rosenblatt's new book Rules for Aging, Resist Normal Impulses, Live Longer and Attain Perfection. It will take place at the Knickerbocker Club, Tuesday, October 24.

Vincent Pastore a/k/a Pussy from The Soprano's leads a cast of well-known and unknown actors at the Farmhouse Restaurant in East Hampton next Friday evening October 13. A party will take place there honoring his latest film Growing Down in Brooklyn.

Actor/Director Rob Reiner will be roasted by the New York Friar's Club at the New York Hilton this Friday October 6, by a long list of celebrities anxious to get their mitts on him. Included among them are Hamptonites Al Franken, Lauren

We'll move you anywhere. Except to tears.

Anyone can move you. Not everyone can move you smoothly and without tears.

That's why you should call Despatch Moving and Storage. We know that breaking something special can also break your heart. So our movers are as responsible as they're reliable. As considerate of your possessions as you are.

Because we want your possessions to arrive safe and sound, our trucks are built to accommodate special containers which help eliminate much of the handling of your goods. We'll wrap your belongings with extra-thick padding, load them into the containers and then take off to our heated warehouse. Slowly and carefully in clean, modern trucks (custom-built to handle the bumps and grinds of the road). By the way, our state-of-the-art warehouse is the only heated storage facility in the Hamptons.

Not only will we move you in one piece, we'll move you anywhere. From Southampton to South Carolina. Montauk to Manhattan. Amagansett to Anchorage. You get the idea.

Despatch Moving and Storage. Save the tissues for the other guys.

tradition at her Survival parties to run out of the free beer and booze. But we managed.

Now Linda is holding an I Survived the Summer Party. It seems a little tamer than its cousins, but then, after all the noise of the summer, we need a little peace and quiet. It will be at the Paradise Cafe in Sag Harbor, there will be an open bar, music, dancing in the aisles, and hors d'oeuvres and desserts prepared by Chef Steven Putnam. All proceeds from the $35 admission charge will benefit the Have a Heart Community Trust Back to School program which will provide children with warm clothing, boots school supplies and other accessories for the winter.

The second event supporting my theory is the annual Bridgehampton Car Rallye on Saturday morning, October 14. About 40 old cars – pre 1953 – assemble on the grounds of the Bridge Hampton Historical Society and one at a time, at two minute intervals, get driven to a starting platform where a car buff with a microphone talks to the owners and drivers for two minutes, and then sends them off on a forty mile drive over a prescribed course which is, in fact, the major back roads of the Hamptons. Winners are selected on the basis of accurate navigation and a predicted speed, and the proceeds from the event benefit the museum.

It was four years ago that the promoters of this rally asked me, as editor of this newspaper, (and as the owner of a not-yet-eligible 1959 Triumph TR-3) to be the man with the microphone at the starting platform. I said sure I would, and I dressed in a tuxedo — I think this was the first time anyone had ever done this — for the occasion.

After it was over, I asked how I did and was told fine and then was asked, I thought, to come back the following year and do it again.

The night before the event a year later, there was a banquet I attended at which everyone said what a wonderful job I had done and how my tuxedo seemed to be the perfect touch the year before.

I showed up the following morning just before 10 a.m., the appointed hour of the start, to find there was already a man on the starting platform with a microphone. It was famous race car commentator, Jackie Stewart.

I went over to the platform, saw the man who headed up this event and he told he did not have the heart to tell me at the banquet the night before that Jackie Stewart would be taking over for me.

I got very angry at this, since I had gone to the trouble of dressing in a tuxedo early in the morning, had given the event publicity in the paper and had invited numerous friends and family over to the start, but I bit my tongue and said nothing. I headed across the museum lawn and out toward the street, taking big, stomping steps. I was going home.

And it was that minute I heard a familiar voice through the trees. It was Paul Sydney, the main announcer at WLNG Radio in Sag Harbor, sitting in a chair out in front of the WLNG Newswagon parked at the curb, interviewing people who were wandering by.

So, Mr. Supervisor, you think this is a wonderful event for the town?

Absolutely, Paul. And we have a full complement of police on the roads to see to it that there is no accident — these are very valuable old cars after all and none have the present day safety gear.

I was desperate that he not see me because I was sure he would ask me over to be interviewed. I ducked behind a tree. Then I ran to another tree and ducked behind that. I must have looked like a Roadrunner cartoon. My goal was my car parked on the other side of the Newswagon. I'd have to sneak around.

So, Dan, I see you are all dressed up in your tuxedo to do the honors on the starting platform this morning.

GO SOAK YOUR HEAD, PAUL.

I beg your pardon?

THESE PEOPLE ARE A BUNCH OF IDIOTS, PAUL.

How can you say that?

THEY ARE LYING, NO GOOD TWO TIMERS. AND I'M TWICE AS GOOD AS THAT LOWLIFE JACKIE STEWART.

I dashed to the far door of my car and slumped to the ground to catch my breath. I fumbled for my car keys. I was getting away clean.

Sometime I'll tell you what happened at the Biggest Clam Competition in Amagansett three years ago. It would be about in the middle of the movie.

We Need Two Olympics: The Enhanced Olympics And The Squeaky Clean Olympics

By Dan Rattiner

After watching two weeks of Olympic Games, I think I can tell who takes steroids and who doesn't. Most of the participants wear little more than their underwear. And taking steroids leaves you grotesquely musclebound. The result is there for all to see.

I know all of us would like to think that all these young men and women have worked out a lot, giving up what would otherwise be a normal youth, and that here they were, hand in hand in sporting competition, white people, black people, yellow people and red people, proving once again that we are all the same under the skin.

We are not all the same under the skin. Some have chemically induced muscles. Some don't.

At the start of the games, I saw a documentary about how easy it is to fool the Olympic Testers. There was footage from a jury trial in Germany, where former East German athletes who had won a bushel of medals at the summer games in 1968 and 1972 did so without being caught but were now suffering severe side effects. There were interviews with them outside the courtroom. Some had been given these drugs when they were thirteen years-old and told that if they didn't take them they would go to jail.

On trial was the head of the East German Olympic Squad who had ordered the doping and the special tricks so nobody would get caught. Some of those who had taken these drugs came into the courtroom in wheel chairs. One of them had even had to have a sex change with a resulting name change. The Olympic Official was sent to prison.

Also in this documentary was footage of the Canadian sprinter Ben Johnson who won the hundred yard dash, set a new world record and a week later had had the gold medal taken away when it was proven he had taken steroids. There he was, on the screen, getting ready for his final run, so muscle bound in his upper arms and upper legs that it seemed unreal.

Many of the participants in the Olympics this year showed almost identical musculature. I've seen

"He's a contender now," a commentator said.

Having made up my mind that I could easily tell who among the Olympians was on steroids just by looking at them, I made note of some of the brave souls who I thought were not on them. I thought Cathy Freeman, the Australian Aborigine sprinter, was not on them. I thought Aleksandr Karelin, the giant Siberian Greco-Roman wrestler, musclebound as he was, was not on them. I thought his victorious opponent, the American Rulon Gardner, also was not on them.

I thought everybody on the volleyball teams was not on steroids. I thought all of the divers and almost all the gymnasts were not on them. Svetlana Khorkina clearly was not on them.

It seemed to me that some of these champions were brave to refuse steroids, and then have to compete against those that did. My conclusion is that there ought to be two sets of Summer Olympic Games. One for those who choose to take anything they possibly can to win, and one for those who choose to do them clean. We could call one the Enhanced Olympics and cheer as they break all the records, and we can call the other the Squeaky Clean Olympics and cheer those who break those lesser records.

I don't think we would have to worry about who enters what. The people who choose to screw themselves up, if they entered the Squeaky Clean Olympics, would be clearly running so far ahead they'd have to slow down to a trot just to make things close.

And everybody would know who they are anyway. All you have to do is look at them. •

...cleaning people finding hypodermic needles in the dirty sheets and bedding in Olympic village.

pictures of Mark Spitz, the great American swimmer who got so many gold medals. He was not musclebound in the grotesque way that these current swimmers, just about every one of them, seemed to be.

The commentators for NBC said that there were at least two steroid compounds that were totally undetectable in any laboratory. They reported on cleaning people finding hypodermic needles in the dirty sheets and bedding in Olympic Village. They said that you could work so hard and it would be for nothing if you didn't do what everybody else did. They said the difference between gold and silver could be as much as a million dollars in contracts and endorsements. And then they said nothing further about it – although at the start of a particular swimming race they pointed out one American Olympian who had a tiny head between two broad shoulders – he looked like a cartoon superhero – and who they said had just gained forty pounds of muscle in two months.

A HOLOCAUST SURVIVOR SPEAKS HERE

By Joan Zandell

When you first meet them, Holocaust survivors seem no different than other people. Some might seem to have a higher threshold as well as a greater need for theatricality, intrigue and excitement in their lives than most, whereas others can feel safe only when they remain completely invisible. But sooner or later, there is a common thread, that of habitual over-reaction, seen to the outsider as nothing more serious than a flair for the dramatic. Today that flair is explained as post-traumatic stress disorder. Many survivors would not find it worth mentioning that they experience never-ending, recurring nightmares from which they awake night after night, compulsively reliving the unutterable horrors they have undergone.

In most survivors' households after the war, time stood still. There was the distinction of then and now. Before the war, they were there. After the war they are here. Children were born here. Relatives, homes, all worldly possessions were lost, there. In new homes around the world ranging from South America, to Israel, to Czechoslovakia, to New York, they lived as if time had stopped and they were existing in some existential place somewhere in their country of origin.

The ritual storytelling of happier times, whether to oneself or others, originated as a survival mechanism in the camps themselves. It was a way to focus on something that gave them hope and that would get them through their darkest moments. For Rena Kornreich Gelissen it was the memory of her mother baking bread in their home, and the love and safety of that home. One Holocaust survivor shared that the recurring thought that got him through the camps was the vision of his wife's hands and his love for her.

He lived in the hope that when it was all over they would be reunited and he would touch those beautiful hands again.

Storytelling was a natural part of life in the New World. It may have transformed into spontaneous afternoon events acted out by surviving family members. It might end with the playing of a familiar tune on the family piano and an uncle stopping by on his way to work with foreign cookies in his pockets for the children that to this day, cannot be eaten without thoughts of him.

At home, English or Spanish or Hebrew was not spoken, whereas German, Polish, Russian or Yiddish prevailed. America was the vast English speaking world outside where children went to school each day and played with the neighbor's kids. Very few children in most U.S. neighborhoods in the 1950's spoke a language other than English, resulting in some youngsters acting as translators for younger refugees.

In my community, there was an Auschwitz survivor who beat her children regularly for perceived slights like walking through the house to the bathroom in wet shoes when it was raining outside after she had just washed the floors. At those times, when she would lose control, the siblings would start to scream, and I would be left in the playroom, to wait out the beatings and the subsequent terrifying outcry, alone. But in the world of Holocaust survivors, this was normal.

My mother's girlfriends all cooked exceptionally well and spoke halting English with heavy Russian, Hungarian, Romanian and German accents. In the warm weather they would wear sleeveless blouses, shamelessly revealing the numbers tattooed on their arms next to their new gold bracelets as they placed another piece of home made apple cake on my plate telling me to eat, even when I was full to bursting. They had all survived places with names like Bergen-Belsen and Auschwitz - Birkenau, and they talked about strangely exotic locales with names like Siberia and Czernovitz and Prague, while they poured the freshly made coffee that was to accompany the apple cake and the inevitably romantic cigarette.

These survivors were people in the throes of life, making up for lost time in a new and mysterious culture whose values had no reference point for their reality. Nor did the majority of Americans have any real understanding of the sort of humiliation, degradation and demoralization - the sheer hell these passionate immigrants had experienced. In those days, unlike the O.J. Simpson murder trial, the Eichmann trial could not be watched on CNN for eight hours a day. And even if it had been, would all of America have watched? As if a guided tour of Hades existed, the most seriously undereducated, seemed then as they do today, to ask the most startlingly insensitive questions with lascivious curiosity.

On Friday night, after services at the Jewish Center for the Hamptons, Rena Kornreich Gelissen accompanied by her co-writer Heather Dune Macadam, spoke about their book, Rena's Promise and she spoke about surviving Auschwitz. Now a tottering eighty-year-old grandmother, she said that after putting it all on paper through her co-writer Heather, she feels entitled to forget a few of the details.

She spoke of how she and her sister escaped the operating rooms of Mengele, The Angel of Death, and shared with us the thoughts and promises that gave her and her sister the hope and the strength to survive. They were only 20 and 22 years old respectively when they entered Auschwitz. They managed to survive not only Auschwitz but also Birkenau, which combined, lasted for a period of three years.

Toward the end of the evening, when questions from the audience were encouraged, an audience member asked Rena to describe "a typical day at Auschwitz." Rena sat up in disbelief at the question. I squirmed in my seat resenting not only the man's query but the upbeat, cool, and insistent tone with which it was asked.

By Rena and others exposing the truth, was the licentious questioning of holocaust survivors now in the same league, to be enjoyed as a titillating, voyeuristic, horror aperitif, akin to listening to stories about children being sexually molested and tortured by their parents on Gerry Springer? Or now that the holocaust was documented and acknowledged worldwide as a reality, were American Jews being seduced by a glorification of suffering that they clearly could never match? And as a result of her suffering, would they ultimately make this little woman a saint? Rena is old and frail now, and had she had the strength to respond, perhaps

Is Our East End Water Clean Or Dirty? Some Answers And Some Dirty Tactics

By Dan Rattiner

Last week, the Towns of Southampton and East Hampton sponsored a "Drinking Water Summit" in Wainscott. Among those attending were numerous experts on water quality in this area, along with such longtime planners as Lee Koppelman, executive director of the Long Island Planning Board, and Vito Minei, director of the Suffolk County Health Department, which monitors water quality testing in our community.

Almost all of them said that water quality at this time is excellent. They also agreed that prospects are good.

"You don't need to be concerned about your water supply," said Herman Miller of the Suffolk County Water Authority.

"I don't think anyone should go home tonight concerned that your drinking water supply is imperiled," said Lee Koppelman.

This meeting was held in response to public concerns about our drinking water. It is so far, so good. Although as recently as last year, there have been wells tested by the Health Department that have excessive amounts of pesticides in them, apparently due to bug spray chemicals put down by the farmers for their crops or homeowners for their lawns and gardens. That our community is being transformed from a rural area of farms, to a suburban area of manicured lawns and landscaping surrounding the large new homes being built by the wealthy is no big secret. East Hampton alone reports an average of one new building permit a DAY legally issued in that town. That this will ultimately change the look of the Hamptons from its cedar trees and beach grasses and other indigenous plantings to, well, Beverly Hills, is certainly of some concern. That this will ultimately poison our water supply should be an even bigger cause for alarm. In fact, very little is being done about it.

Instead, it seems to me, attention is being diverted from the real concern - residential construction and its attendant landscaping - to the major aquifer of fresh water on Long Island. The pine barrens is indeed huge. It measures about twenty miles by ten. It was a wonderful thing that Amper was able to defeat an entire army of developers and that our fresh water aquifer will remain pure.

After the battle ended, Amper became the President of the Long Island Pine Barrens Society. He stands vigil today to see to it that no harm comes to the pine barrens.

As for the Drinking Water Summit, Amper announced he would boycott it, and he did.

"I don't think the towns wanted a dialogue (about water)," he said.

"(The meeting) was a groundwater dog and pony show. To bless it with credibility as though it was a bona fide forum would be fraudulent."

Amper's complaint is that the water experts in this community largely do not agree with him about the threat posed to the community's water supply by the expansion of a private school in this community that goes by the name of The Ross School. The Ross School consists of about ten buildings that sit in one corner of an otherwise vacant woods they own out by the East Hampton Airport that is zoned commercial industrial, as in - you could build an oil refinery there. The size of the woods they own is about seventy acres. They have proposed to put more buildings into these woods for the school over the next ten years, a side issue, the expansion of a school in our community, by a man named Richard Amper who has only limited expertise in the area of water management.

Amper is a private citizen who lives up-Island in Ridge, who performed a remarkable service for the east end by leading a fight ten years ago against commercial developers in an area bounded by Riverhead, Westhampton and Hampton Bays called the Pine Barrens. Amper almost singlehandedly won this fight, and in the process got the State to declare the pine barrens off limits to any development whatsoever because it sat on top of

Water

ultimately expanding their student body from about 130 which it is now to about 500. To put it in perspective, when it is completed, the Ross School will be about the size of Southampton College, though in a very wooded area. (You can drive down there today and see for yourself how the existing buildings nestle in the woods.) Presently it is about one quarter that size.

Amper has taken the position that the expansion of the Ross School is the biggest threat to our water supply since the beginning of time. That it is a school largely for the children of local residents – there are no boarding facilities in the proposal – is of no concern to him. That it would provide a greatly enhanced academic and intellectual life to the community is of no concern to him. That it would bring about 400 very desirable employment opportunities in an academic setting to a community that is largely becoming a service community to the rich is of no concern to him. Amper is a fighter, he is a dirty fighter as it is turning out, and he is determined to make this look like the biggest disaster ever, particularly to our water supply, that has ever happened.

Amper has sort of sidled sideways into this controversy. He has announced that the Ross School sits atop the pine barren aquifer at its eastern end. It does not. Though I am sure there is water under the Ross School as there is under all the land everywhere, it is well to the east. Herewith I attach the logo of his organization, showing with raindrops the location of the big aquifer that he saved ten years ago. The way he has drawn it, it extends from Bay Shore to the Southampton Town Line, and though this doubles the size of the actual aquifer as defined by hydrologists, I won't argue with it. Even in this expansive mode though, it doesn't include the Ross School.

A declaration that the pine barrens aquifer extends now into East Hampton, of course, coming from the founder of the Long Island Pine Barrens Society, attracted considerable attention. The state looked into it. Perhaps the boundaries of the pine barrens should be redrawn. Hydrologists said they could not. Then a proposal was put on the table that both East Hampton and Southampton Towns vote themselves into the Pine Barrens. This too failed. Where the matter sits now, politically, is that the Towns of East and Southampton have agreed to form a committee to look into water concerns on the South Fork. It was this committee that put it together the Drinking Water Summit in Wainscott that Amper boycotted.

Through it all, Amper has exhibited tactics designed to get his way that are shocking in their recklessness. He had print ads made that showed the school children of the Ross School happily dancing around a bulldozer manned by Mrs. Ross as she leads them on a charge to bulldoze down the entire seventy acres. He authorized a radio commercial in which members of a made-up Ross School Board meet to discuss ways they can destroy the environment while at the same time fooling the public into thinking they are fixing up the environment.

More recently, within the last three weeks, Amper has sent out a mailing to all of East and Southampton residents urging them to send donations ($1,000 is suggested) to the Long Island Pine Barrens Society to allow it to stop the Ross School. Here are some of the incredible things that Amper has written in this letter.

"The proposed project is intended to dramatically expand the Ross School into the Ross Institute... The premise that we teach our children respect for the environment by bulldozing more than 70 acres of Long Island's premier ecosystem is positively preposterous... Incredibly and irresponsibly, they're holding drinking water protection hostage for their own pet project... we must prevent mega-development from obliterating the central tract of East Hampton's precious Pine Barrens and the underlying supply of pure fresh drinking water for our children and grandchildren... Please mail your contribution today... for our part, we'll keep you informed through our newsletter and any project updates that may be needed to let you know how the campaign is going."

The dreaded Ross Institute that Amper refers to is that division of this school that will invite educators in to propose or demonstrate new ways to educate our children. It will interface with the local public schools.

The whole Amper campaign reminds me of nothing so much as the wild demonstrations that took place years ago around Kennedy Airport when it was proposed to allow the newly built Concorde supersonic passenger jet to land there from London and Paris.

Nice Guys Finish...?

In The Battle For Niceness And Gentleness, There's No Stopping Al And Hillary

By Dan Rattiner

Two weeks ago, I wrote how the four horses were rounding the far turn, heading for home and they were neck and neck — Hil, Rick, George W and Al — and it was looking more and more like it was going to be some horse race, with bleary eyed we'll never concede speeches at five o'clock in the morning the day after election day, with demands for a recount, with all eyes on the following day write-in ballots.

This week, it looks like the country might be spared the incredibly boring sleeplessness of all that. Hil has begun to pull away from Rick. Al has begun to pull away from George W. And on board the mounts, the various spin doctors, campaign managers and marketing men have begun to change strategies. Shall we snap the whip? Shall we spur the flanks? There are thirty-two days to the finish. There's plenty of time for an adjustment here at the beginning of the home stretch.

The changes being considered, I think, are in the nice guy department. Some years, being a nice guy could be a disaster. Bob Dole comes to mind. Other years, being a nice guy wins you the election. Jimmy Carter comes to mind.

I think until now, charging out of the start and racing down the backstretch, the Nice Guy approach has been on the back burner. George W. and his running mate Dick Chaney both talk out of the side of their mouths like Jimmy Cagney in a gangster movie. Hil has come across as tough as nails. And Al Gore has presented a personality not unlike a cardboard cutout. Honest, maybe. But not nice.

for it?

In other words, what we want to do here is elect somebody to be Santa Claus. Is Santa Claus a nice guy, or what?

The first glimmerings that the nice guy approach would make a difference at the polls took place about a month ago when Al Gore chose Joe Lieberman for a running mate. Lieberman IS a nice guy. And if he could not play Santa Claus because of religious principles, well, his presence on the ballot could still bump up Gore's ratings three percent in the polls. A further one percent bump up came because of the famous Al and Tipper Gore kiss. This was not a big nasty now I'm aroused kiss. It was a nice guy I love you kiss. And if it lasted a long, long time there on the podium in front of the Democratic Convention crowd, well, that's what I love you is all about.

Historically, however, the Republicans just never get it when it comes to the nice guy department. They are not nice guys, by definition. They are Let's Keep America Strong guys, and If Some of the Money Made Trickle Down to the Middle and

We live, however, in wonderful times. There's no great threat of war anywhere. There have been ten uninterrupted years of prosperity. And the biggest issue seems to be what to do with the upcoming six hundred billion dollar surplus. Give everybody a tax break? Spend it on health and education? How about just throw it out a window and let everybody scramble around on the sidewalk

Nice

Lower Classes, I'm Sure They Deserve it Guys.

Indeed, in the recent Hillary Clinton - Rick Lazio debate, which I saw, it was Hillary who came off as the nice guy, gracefully fending off the attacks of her opponent who, at one point, walked across the stage to "invade Hillary's space," as a friend of mine put it.

Nice guys just don't do that to a woman, even in this day and age.

Here is how a Huntington, (L. I.) woman with the unlikely name of Jane M. Reader, saw it, in a letter to Newsday.

"After watching the outrageous, arrogant, unprofessional behavior of Rick Lazio at the first debate, I have no choice: I must vote for Hillary Clinton. Lazio may think he is one tough guy and that this alone will appeal to the voters, but I think we all see beyond that phony grin and embarrassingly rude performance..."

Was she right? The media's view of the debate may have been mixed, but the public's was not. According to pollsters, Hillary surged eight points.

At this point, Dan's Papers readers may be excused if they think I am focusing too much on appearances and not enough on the issues. Well, I guess they are right about that. On the other hand, how else can you explain this surging back and forth in the polls? Is it their view of the issues that is surging back and forth in the polls? I don't think so. It's appearances.

I'm told that in every political camp at this point of the home stretch, (with the exception of Lieberman who does not need advice), the candidates are being groomed and prepped for a "I'm a Nice Guy" finish.

Hillary was relaxed and happy moving through a crowd upstate last week. "Let's all get a cup of coffee!" she shouted to a large crowd pointing at a nearby diner. They all went. This was not hard as nails behavior.

George W. toured a maternity ward in Little Rock (!!). He handed out sixteen page booklets entitled "Blue Print for the Middle Class." In Kansas City, George W. kneeled in a union hall to hold a microphone for Jim Mullen, a former police officer who was shot and paralyzed from the neck down and is now in a wheelchair. After Mullen finished speaking, Bush leaned over and kissed him on the forehead.

As for Al Gore, he is now spending hours every day taking lessons to bring out the "niceness" in him. He has diction teachers, speech advisors. Everyone urges him to keep on relaxing. Right.

As for Dick Cheney, they've told him shape up or we'll stick a sock in it. •

Elvis, Aliens, Marilyn , West Nile, O.J., Radiation, Mind Control, And The Football Slave Trade

By Jerry Cimisi

CIA Agents Infest US Mass Media... Cocaine Auction... FBI Report on JFK Autopsy... Biological Warfare in New York City... Americans for Cloning Elvis... Andy Kaufman Lives... Mass Suicides in Recent Years... Top Ten Reasons Why OJ Didn't Do It....

When I first heard of Peter Weber's new book, The Incredible Internet Guide to Scandals and Conspiracies, I thought it would be a narrative study of the variegated, sometimes ridiculous, sometimes accurate information one can find on the net regarding – well, just about everything. When I had the book in hand I discovered the last part to be true. Or I should say at least this book attempted to get just about everything inside within its nearly 500 pages. But instead of narrative it was more like an Internet phonebook – or, perhaps more accurately, an Internet movie listing, with websites listed under categories followed by a brief description.

Visitation Survey – have you ever been abducted by aliens, or the government?... Psychics and the FBI – psychics impressions on the Jon Benet Ramsey case... Scandal of Belgium's Football Slave Trade – apparently Belgium soccer moguls recruit Africans and treats them as slaves... The Trinity Report – Would you like to join a cult like Heaven's Gate before all the really negative stuff comes out?

Of course in a book like this there is the irresistible temptation to search out the more outre sites, but there are plenty of sober reports: real, true FBI files on Marilyn Monroe, etc., the CDC on diseases and the PETA site on animals. There is a database of government websites at <http://ciir2.cs.umass.edu/Govbot> that lists 1,594,000 plus federal sites.

And then again, there's www.yankee-hater.com. (Yankees are baseball players. Yankees are hated because they are Yankees. We have only met one Yankee in person: Joe Pepitone. He was drinking martinis....)

So what was my first cyber foray based on these pages? www.disinfo.com. This site provided links to other sites concerning subjects as diverse (or, ultimately, connected?) as Black Helicopters, Waco Killers Coverup and the Military use of Marine Mammals.

Under the heading of Biological Warfare in New York City, writer/artist Robert Lederman of the Greenwich Village Gazette, posits that Mayor Giuliani, the city government at large and the CDC are apparently in a plot to infect (pun intended) New York with a West Nile scare so the company one of the mayor's major health advisors works Island, the resurgence of yellow fever and the biological Manipulation of Human Populations.

Speaking of which, there was the "The Woodpecker Effect," a section of disinfo.com detailing that in 1978, Eugene, Oregon and a good deal of the Pacific Northwest was bombarded with Extra Low Frequency (ELF) radiation eventually traced to a Navy base in California. Doctors were being confronted with an unusual number of patients complaining of headaches, fatigue and anxiety – and then the piece makes the sudden jump to the unnatural microwave inundation being the cause of the "egocentric machismo warrior-anarchists" who so violently protested against the World Trade organization last year. A quantum, dubious leap perhaps, but, then there are the studies of Winifred Gallagher who links natural and manmade electromagnetic fields to the behavior of individuals.

The Search for the Military Mammalian Candidate discussed the by-now-not-so-secret use of marine mammals by the Navy – to find mines, place mines, find lost torpedos and perhaps a lot of other things. In 1997 the Seattle Times reported that during the Republican Convention held in San Diego the previous year, the Navy had a number of dolphins patrolling San Diego Bay – for terrorist divers?

Subsequently the Navy supposedly ordered the decommissioning of its marine mammal unit (retire them to Sea World?) but as of right now it still receives funding for the operation.

On related sites you can click on info that relates government trained dolphin assassins (with harpoons strapped on their backs, they stab swimmers – a violence right out of a comic book); marine mammals being subjected to underwater sonar that disrupts normal biological functions; TV Frontline's coverage of Navy dolphins; "the horrors perpetrated on dolphins as experimental subjects"; and an article from Dive International magazine (June, 1998) that describes not just the American but Ukrainian dolphin programs.

Speaking of assassins: of course there are the assassination websites: JFK (and JFK Jr.), RFK, Martin Luther King, Malcolm, Diana and Dodi, John Lennon, Chile's assassination squads, Joseph Stalin, Lincoln and John Wilkes Booth (did he act alone?).

There are the "ties" between Kennedy and Lincoln. JFK elected to Congress in 1946, Lincoln in 1846; Lincoln was elected president in 1860, JFK, 1960; both wives lost children while living in the White House; both men were killed on a Friday by a bullet to the head; both was assassinated by southerners and succeeded by southerners – vice for can make money on a vaccine. Lederman, discribed in the site as a perpetual thorn in Giuliani's side, got some notoriety by creating a mural of the mayor in which hizzoner looked a bit like Hitler. Lederman has been arrested 41 times for protesting Giuliani's policies – but apparently has never been convicted of any of these charges.

Mr. Lederman might sound a bit out there, but his thesis about West Nile has more than a few strands of truth. In fact, he includes some articles from the more sober media establishments, such as The Times and Daily News. The latter paper says federal officials would recommend the use of a vaccine for West Nile. Even as the the feds muse, OraVax is manipulating a vaccine for yellow fever into one for West Nile. And it just so happens that the VP of OraVax has been a major advisor to Giuliani in this health "crisis."

As to the assertion that 1999 was the first time the virus ever appeared on this side of the Atlantic, the Rockefeller Institute in Manhattan and Yale in Connecticut have been doing research on the virus since the '50s. In regards to the deadliness of the virus, Lederman says with the CDC announcing it killed seven people among the thirty million in the greater New York metro area, the virus was far less deadly than Giuliani's police force.

Of course, one site leads to others. You can click onto a profile of OraVax, and then one dedicated to resistance to malathion or one that details the government's secret germ warfare experiments (and, indeed, there were a number); or there's Plum presidents by the name of Johnson: Lincoln's VP Andrew Johnson was born in 1808; JFK's VP Lyndon Baines Johnson was born in 1908.

Throughout the exponential explosion of the Internet throughout the 1990s, there have been the detractors and celebrants of what is certainly a new thing in human affairs. The lure and fault of the Internet is that one is more than half seduced into the irrational feeling that one can search out the truth of everything in this electronic, lightspeed (well, depending on the hardware) world. The old cartoon of the seeker coming to the mountain and beseeching the guru, "What is the meaning of life?" might now be altered to the enlightened one tapping at his laptop, "theanswer.com."

It should be added that if the ability of the Internet to disperse information to anyone with a computer is a new thing, the nature of the Internet is very much akin to the newspapers that were published in this country not all so long ago. The "scandal" of Thomas Jefferson fathering children with his slave, Sally Hemings, first "broke" in what today we might call a scandal sheet in the early 1800s. A perusal of the papers of the time would find more than a little conspiracy mindedness and personal eccentricities influencing journalism than today's Washington Post or New York Times would tolerate.

This is good and bad. Millions of private websites allow anyone to have his or her say, for whatever it's worth. For the receiver, the researcher, the reporter, one may have to do a bit of trudging through the dross to find the gold. Which there is. Major media, increasingly concentrated, more and more controlled by large corporations, have too much a share in the establishment. They will chase after some things, but give superficial coverage to others. If the Internet is rife with improbable scenarios of aliens, government hit squads and Monica's dress, well, something fishy, did, it seems happened in Roswell in 1947, and the CIA said it tore the offending page concerning assassination from its guerilla training manual for South American contras; and, of course, Monica was hardly a UFO. Whether it's dolphins or radiation exposure or the multitude of people associated with Bill Clinton who have somehow managed to die, it is continuously obvious that the government, whether in the person of one individual or a nebulous agency, has lied to the country, denied wholly things that were being done even as the lie was spoken.

I once asked a friend, "Just where is the Internet?" He said, "It's in your computer."

In the '60s, Marshall McLuhan gained a good deal of sociological status with his "global village" vision of the near future. To some the Internet may be the global village incarnate, if not quite the one McLuhan predicted. If dubbed reruns of Bonanza are watched in the Middle East, Islamic fundamentalists don't want to share a village with Christian fundamentalists in the American heartland – and vice versa. I can bring the world, projected through countless eyes, into my computer, but perhaps the geography of our prejudices will hardly be annihilated any time soon.

The proponents of the New World Order (NWO) might applaud the Global Village. There's a site about branding your children for the NWO, New World Order Conspiracy NewsGroup, Pat Robertson's Old World Order, End of the World and the New World Order.

"The goal of the NWO planners is to have absolute control of every individual on planet earth. The final stage being to place a mark on your right hand or on your forehead. You will be asked to pledge your allegiance to the one world leader..."

In www.freedomdomain.com I read about The Secret History of America – The Greatest Conspiracy on Earth. Here's a section where the Federal Emergency Administration, which in fact can assume dictatorial powers during a declared national emergency, is constructing concentration camps for rounding up unruly – or complacent – citizens: photographs of "...long cattle fencing with barbed wire turned inward..."

Then again, when you read the very real stories of how the U.S. exposed hundreds of thousands of citizens in Utah and Nevada to radiation from its above ground nuclear testing in the '50s and '60s, while denying there was any danger, and then denied that subsequent ailments such as cancer could have any connection; and when you remember what the government did to Japanese citizens during WWII (but not, for some reason, German citizens), well...

Of course you can take you mind off such somber apocalypses by visiting the 24 Hour Church of Elvis or learn it was Elvis who killed Kennedy and that Ann-Margaret was a Russian Spy. Poor Elvis. The King would much rather we'd honor him by surfing the web to see his Cadillacs (just two of 'em).

Then there's this thought: perhaps the Internet itself is the opening tool of the New World Order. After all, when we're all linked... who's to say what will be coming through that screen?

From freedomdomain.com: Mind Control (Electronic): "Can the government... read your thoughts? Even worse can they 'Implant thoughts' into your head? Would that be the ultimate mind control... and you could never even detect it?"

When I first met Vince Galluccio, at one of the events of Wine Weekend, he talked with passion about his recent purchase of Gristina Vineyards.

Vince was born in Brooklyn and as he told me, as we sat with him and his wife, Judi in their magnificent waterfront home in Westhampton Beach, "My parents adopted me when they were in their 40s and I grew up in a typical Italian American extended family. My adoptive father owned a restaurant and the family made wine at home, so one of my earliest recollections is the intense aroma of fermentation. When I go into our winery and this smell hits me I still find it very evocative and also very sensuous and it is interesting to see how this effect also hits visitors when they tour the winery."

Following his education at St. John's University, where he majored in Marketing and Finance, Vince obtained his first job with the still very new and relatively unknown company named IBM, so I asked him how he had the foresight to select a company which was due to have such an amazing future. His answer came with a loud laugh, (laughter is a very major part of Vince's life), "I thought the interview was for a job with AT&T! I had read about the way their CEO had worked his way up within the company and saw this as a great example to try to emulate. Quite soon into the interview I realized that the recruitment opportunity was with this other company, IBM but despite the initial problems, they still offered me the job."

Vince still believes he was guided then and in later career changes by this decision to be a pioneer with IBM. "I was one of the first twelve at IBM to go into their international business, and one of the first in their computer school as they prepared to move out of punch cards into the new world of computers. I ended up spending twenty five years with them, I developed what I call 'plane fever', spent years traveling all round the world and loved it, even though traveling in Asia was much harder than it is today. I loved the excitement and didn't want it to stop so I made sure that everything I did was successful. Altogether, I spent eighteen years overseas before IBM offered me a retirement plan I could not refuse."

This was the first of Vince's retirements and did not last long because British Telecom, or BT, was in the process of trying to drag itself out of an age of being a government owned monopoly into becoming a competitive international business and for this they wanted an injection of American entrepreneurship, so Vince was approached. As he talked about this, with amusing tales of the almost internecine warfare he encountered, mainly between the English and Scottish executives, he told of the loneliness at times of living in a new country, even one that almost spoke the same language and how almost in self defense he developed a liking for the somewhat esoteric and to many totally unfathomable game of cricket. This explained to me why the first objects I saw decorating the splendid entrance hall of their house was a selection of antique cricket bats and balls. As someone born in England, before I discovered baseball and the Yankees I was a firm believer that cricket was a game that God probably plays. So, before I found out that Vince also had been involved in watching and playing cricket I had assumed that they had put the bats out, rather like flying a token Union Flag, to welcome their visitor!

Apart from the camaraderie of the pub scene after the local cricket matches, Vince also received another, even more tangible benefit when a contact he had made came to him with a proposal to use his expertise in putting companies together in the developing field of fiber optics. "Unfortunately, this turned out to be about three years premature but because of this I met the person who had just obtained a major franchise for running cables in Manhattan. To cut the story short, four of us, with little or no money behind us, ended up closing some very major deals such as NASDAQ and Republic Bank, much to the chagrin of our competition. Our modest company became Metromedia Fiber Network, which we took public in 1997 and I became a director of the company until this week when I resigned my directorships to concentrate on our new ventures."

When Vince used the word 'our' to describe the new career path it was a very deliberate use of the word, for Judi Galluccio is an integral part of their new ventures. Judi and Vince met through a business contact after Judi had built up a very successful chain of retail stores and at their second business meeting they went on to talk of many things other than business and discovered that they had a great number of common interests. "I asked Judi to come to an antique fair for our first date,"

Vince reminisced, "Then I found out that I had got the date of the fair wrong and we ended up walking and talking all around Manhattan for about eighteen hours ending up with a very late meal about 2 a.m. down in SoHo. We soon realized that this was very special for both of us and we decided to get married in France." Now, for most people, one ceremony or at the most a wedding and a blessing would suffice but Vince does not do anything by halves. "To date, we have had four weddings. The first was a problem because Judi did not have a valid residence permit in France. So, we then were married on the beach near our place on Long Boat Key in Florida. Again, a problem. I am a Florida resident but Judi was not, so we had to have the third try, again in Florida and this time all was in order."

This is not the end of the story, because another facet of Vince is that of an incurable romantic.

"We were still living in London and I arranged for our family to be in New York so that we could renew our vows before them because for a variety of reasons they had not been able to be at the first ceremonies." Judi picked up the story, "Vince kept this a total secret from me. He said we were going to this top level company function in New York and that I should go out and buy a new outfit. Now, I should have been suspicious when he said it should be a cream colored outfit because this is an area he normally would not be involved in. Anyway I bought this gorgeous outfit when I came back to Manhattan, went with him to the hotel where they had put all the signs up as for a company function, and then they opened the doors of the ballroom for us to go in and there were all our family and close friends. It was a very emotional moment and something I will always treasure." Now this renewal of vows may have brought closure to their marriage ceremonies and vow renewals but with Vince one can never be sure, for this is a man of decision and impulse.

Vince and Judi made another quick decision when they were shown round the house they purchased on Apautuck Point in Westhampton Beach, "Almost as soon as we walked in the door, we both knew that this was the place for us," Judi explained, "At first we had intended to buy a place in Europe and had looked at many places and many vineyards, because by then we had decided that wine was to be a large part of our future plans. However, for family reasons mainly, returning home was our choice and we set out looking for a home on Long Island where I had been a summer resident in Southampton for many years in the past. Finding the right place took forever but we are delighted that we waited until we saw this house. Then, one day I was reading through a brochure from Cook Pony Farm and said to Vince that they were advertising a winery for sale. As soon as he saw the photo he recognized it as Gristina which we knew very well and whose wines we enjoyed. So, he called the agents and everything happened from there."

Galluccio

Indeed, everything did happen for in, probably record time, Vince and Judi became the owners of what is now Galluccio Estates Gristina Vineyards in Cutchogue on the North Fork. Shortly after the closing, Vince made it very clear that this acquisition was not to be a hobby or a part time project but the first phase of what he intends to be a major business venture. "My intention at Gristina is to make some major capital improvements which will involve the rebuilding of the winery and tasting house and we expect to have the first stage of that completed in time for next spring. Also, I am actively investigating the purchase of land both here on Long Island and in California and Europe," he explained. "My intention is to have a series of companies under a holding company which will plan the total marketing and production strategies. There is a need to upgrade the management decision information available to us and I am bringing in winery management software from California which will enable us to analyze every aspect from the vineyards through to the selling of the wine. I also am determined that we will have goals of consistency, quality and increasing the definition of our wines. I would like to see our Reserve become our Estate wine and move the quality of our reserve wines even higher and for this we will be operating on a two year time scale for achievement. Marketing changes are already underway and I believe that we will be able to attract skills to this region as people understand just what our mission is. Judi and I both enjoy building things and we do not believe in being greedy but in sharing our success and we see this as being a very exciting future for everyone associated with this venture."

Many will already have seen the very striking advertising from Galluccio Estates and Vince said that he has been delighted already by the response. "We are getting calls from people we haven't sold to in ages asking for our Andy's Field Chardonnay and our Rose of Cabernet Sauvignon because people are going into the stores and asking for them. Our ongoing ad campaigns will be designed to raise the awareness of wine drinkers to our products by defining them much more strongly."

When I asked Vince about the differences in running a business where the weather can play an out-of-proportion part in determining the success of any year he was quick to answer, "Many of the businesses I have managed round the world have had to deal with the vagaries of climate and the vagaries of government, which can be even more illogical and frustrating. The thing is to have alternative business plans to cope with such problems and this is what we have already developed and is part of the reason why our business will be internationally based. If nature dictates a bad harvest here you need to be able to balance it from elsewhere in the world. Already I am thinking two years down the road. A lot has happened in a very short time but there is a long way to go. We believe that our timing was great, frankly we always have been very fortunate in this respect and we acknowledge this and believe that giving back to the community is extremely important."

Vince Galluccio is truly a man of action, a pioneer and an internationalist who, in a different age might have been a Francis Drake or a Walter Raleigh. His plans for his winery business are much broader than many first thought. His plans for the Long Island part of the business are bold and challenging and he may well turn out to be the architect for change needed to bring the Long Island wine industry, in total, international acceptance on a grand scale.

Vince, as a perfect gentleman, I know will not begrudge Judi the last word, "We just love it out here. We love the house, the surroundings and the people."

Vince and Judi -- Welcome.

The Sheltered Islander

OBSERVATIONS OF A NEW ISLANDER # 126 THE POWER BEHIND THE THRONE

Little did I realize when I wrote about the impressive selection of toilet paper we have at our IGA, that I would trigger an avalanche of water closet revelations from other islanders.

My friend Patty, told me that I neglected to mention that we can buy scented spindles for toilet paper that are supposed to release country fresh scents when rolled. Furthermore, there's a variety of scents to choose from: rain forest, spring air and wintergreen. I never noticed scented spindles. What was I thinking?

My friend Susan, told me I failed to mention the crocheted toilet paper covers. Those knit things that look like top hats and go over toilet paper rolls. Hey, it takes time and talent to crochet a hat for toilet paper. Some of them even have faceted plastic beads crocheted in. I guess that's so you can put them on the window sill and let them catch the light. Some have little poodle dogs crocheted on top. Toilet paper hats are a genuine American artform. Nothing like this in Europe, honey.

I heard several extremely funny bathroom stories, but the best was told to me by a man who threatened my life if I reveal his name. He told me of an event he experienced when he first encountered potpourri. He was at a Fourth of July afternoon party his brother was having and went to use the bathroom. When he was done he noticed a little box of matches on the back of the toilet. So far so good. Next to the box of matches was a little basket of potpourri, dried fragrant flowers. This was about eighteen years back and it was the first time he'd seen potpourri. It was right next to the little box of matches. Perhaps, he thought, he was supposed to burn one of the little flowers. He picked and lit one little flower. It burned quicker than he thought, and burnt his thumb, so he dropped it and it fell back into the basket. He said he knew it was a mistake as soon as he let it go. Dried flowers treated with scented oils ignite fast.

Now, here he is at a nice party, alone in a bathroom, with a flaming basket of potpourri on the back of a toilet. This was a nice bathroom, so there was a dispenser with those tiny Dixie paper cups. The sink is across the room. He turns on the water and grabs a paper cup. But they really don't hold much water. He tries grabbing for a second cup for the other hand and in his haste, knocks the Dixie dispenser down and the stack of little cups goes flying. The flames are now shooting fourteen inches into the air and making a lot of smoke. He hears someone ask if everything is okay in there. He says 'yes' of course. No reason to think that smoke escaping from a bathroom is cause for concern...

He abandons the cups and begins flinging handfuls of water onto the fire, but he just can't get enough water going because the sink is too far. He notices he has soaked the commode region including the little rug that goes around the toilet. Grabbing the rug, he smothers the flames and saves the day.

Stepping back, he accesses the damage. One burned, soaked basket of previously spring scented potpourri. Approximately one complete stack of Dixie paper cups sprinkled liberally around the bathroom floor. Water everywhere. Black streaks up the shiny wallpaper over the toilet. One soaked and smokey smelling peach colored around-the-toilet rug.

Now his second problem began. He realized if he left the bathroom, someone might see him. If they saw him, he might have to explain why he lit the potpourri and how he destroyed the bathroom. Families being what families are, this would go into the annals of great family stories. He would be reminded of the time he torched the bathroom for the remainder of his life and for six weeks thereafter.

There was only one noble thing to do. Thank God, the bathroom was on the first floor. He unlocked the door, quietly exited through the window which opened to the side of the house. He rounded the corner into the back yard and rejoined the party by standing very close to the barbeque and holding a beer. He figured no one would notice his smokey smell by the barbeque and everyone would naturally assume his wet pants were from him spilling his beer.

The plan worked. He was flipping burgers and talking when, after about twenty minutes he heard his sister-in-law screaming from inside the house. He said she was a sphere destroying female dog (not his exact words). I asked him what he did when she found out. He said he didn't know, he hasn't told her yet. I asked him, could I share this story in his column, he said yes, because they already left for Florida...

elaine k.g. benson, her daughter's column

I had a wonderful day on Sunday. The downside was that I came home with very sticky ankles under my suede pants. The morning was uneventful. I had my morning bath, coffee and the usual phone calls. My phone is always very active in the morning. I knew I had to be in Southampton at Club Colette by noon. I had invited people to the last of the artist's brunches. Club Colette features artists on the walls of the restaurant all summer. I had invited friends to drink mimosas with me. There were fires in the fireplaces when we arrived and the atmosphere was inviting and cozy. Margot Horn (We Lead the Hunt, Real Estate) came by and an artist named Molly Dougenis. The day was too beautiful for words. It wasn't a day to be inside. The out of doors was calling. Still, a friend invited me to stay on for brunch and I was happy to find some quiet time with him. I knew I would head on to the harvest fest at Wolffer Estate (used to be called Sagpond). The winery is beautiful and it couldn't have been a more perfect day for a wine tasting, grape festival.

Last year I attended the wine festival at Channing Daughters winery right up the block from my house. The children were allowed into the vats for a ritual stomping of the grapes. This year I got a turn at Wolffer Estate. I got laughing so hard that I was worried about calming down. I had plans to go to the movies later and was afraid I wouldn't be able to stay still and keep quiet. Before the great grape stomping was a wonderful lunch served by Michael Mosolino (caterer) and his crew. I had eaten but managed to taste a few things including some fresh grapes. Next was the barrel roll. I volunteered for the barrel rolling competition. I was one of the last people to compete. I was watching so I could gain a strategy. I came in fourth overall and there were about forty competitors. Finally anyone who wanted was given a pair of shorts and we jumped into some large plastic containers filled about knee deep with grapes. People talked about an old episode of I Love Lucy and other hysterical images of grape stomping from the past. We started with a lot of solid material and by the time I got out it was a liquid slushy mess. I was glad I had bathed in the morning. Towards the end, a woman came by to ask if we had found a pair of sunglasses in the vat. I felt around with my feet but didn't turn up anything other than more grapes. I was one of the first to jump in and was the last to get out. I couldn't stop laughing. The fact that I have my paintings on the walls became insignificant. The event of the day was all about grapes. I even had someone taking a video of my feet. God only knows where that will show up to haunt me. I have no regrets. I had a great time.

I played hooky all weekend. I went sailing on Saturday, grape stomping on Sunday, and fishing on Monday. I understand I still have work to do but it's been so good to be a little freer with my time and I must admit I like playing better than working. I recommend to everyone who has ever worked in a tourist town that they should take a few days off just after the season. As a matter of fact, most of the people I know are doing just that. We come back refreshed and start the whole process over again. Happy trails!

Artists' Wedding

Weddings are usually fun but the wedding of sculptor Hans van de Bovenkamp and poet/sculptor siv Cedering was even better than most. A small private ceremony was held on Walking Dunes and a reception took place the day after at the bride's home. Friends and family came from near and far and we hope the couple will live happily ever after. P.S. They met at the Elaine Benson Gallery.

"Harvest Festival at Wolffer Vineyards"

The Wolffer Vineyards in Sagaponack celebrated the Annual harvesting of the grapes on Sunday. What a perfect day to be transported by the magical setting at Wolffer's, to memories of France and Italy and I Love Lucy. Reminiscent of "Lucy," celebrants were invited to stomp grapes. The festivities also included Barrel Rolling, Grape Cutting and a special showing of Kimberly Goff's paintings. Food was by Schmidts (Michael Mosolino), the wine flowed and everyone had a barrel of fun.

"Vered Birthday Bash at the White House"

Family and friends gathered at the White House in Sag Harbor to celebrate the 60th Birthday of the one and Only Vered. What a lavish party it was. Dozens and dozens of exotic black roses (Vered's favorite) made up the centerpiece, and the food was sumptuous. The entertainment was non-stop and so were the festivities, but no one had more fun than Vered herself. Her energy was downright contagious. Happy Birthday to a Grand Dame of our East End Art Scene and a dear friend. Thank you for the memories.

YOUR GUIDE TO NORTH FORK WINERIES AND VINEYARDS

Palmer Vineyards Hosts Perfect End To Perfect Pairs Season

By Roy Bradbrook

On weekends throughout the summer, Palmer Vineyards has featured one of its award winning wines and paired it with food prepared from local produce by Marianne Preston, who is a culinary instructor and food writer. Jeanne Lamendola is Special Events Manager for Palmer Vineyards and she told me, "These have all been very successful and there has been a lot of positive feedback from our many visitors over the summer who have sampled our wines and tasted Marianne's dish of the week. When we planned the season I wanted to have a grand finale event and we were very fortunate in getting Scott Tarwater to come here and make one of his special presentations to accompany a gourmet dinner and dancing."

Scott Tarwater is responsible for wines and spirits at Disney's Fulton's Crab House and Portobello restaurants in Orlando and recently took on the added responsibility for 53 other restaurants in the chain. He is a wine educator and gives many teaching presentations on all aspects of wine. Now, 'Aroma component sampling and food and wine cause and effect' sounds a pretty formidable title for a late summer evening party but the 70 plus guests at Palmer Vineyards found that Scott makes every thing he presents very lively, entertaining and informative. Scott is a firm believer that we can all train our noses and palates to better appreciate the nuances of wine and in so doing enjoy wine even more for as he pointed out, "You should find the real quality of wine in the glass and not in the label!"

With the willing help of blindfolded volunteers, he demonstrated how you should always trust your nose because, "Flavor follows aroma." He also showed how food and vice versa. From the opening of his presentation, Scott had vowed to steer clear of winemakers 'jargon' and he stuck manfully to this, only occasionally using words like 'malolactic fermentation' and even then he explained them very succinctly. As a result everyone present, whether wine expert, real or self-styled and novice was able to learn and enjoy. Scott also went over the recommended way to taste wines in order to obtain the fullest appreciation of their merits. So guests, looked, smelt, sipped, gurgled and swallowed, the latter because this was above all a party so spitting out could be safely left for other times.

Tom Drozd is the winemaker at Palmer Vineyards and he talked of how the winery has developed over the years. Each year it always seems that different varietals come in with different levels of ripeness and yield and each year there is one varietal which stands out over the others. This is part of what makes wine making on Long Island so fascinating. He also talked about their relationship with Scott Tarwater and how in recent years Palmer and the Fulton Crab Houses have worked together to develop a blend of wine which matches the food served in their restaurants. "To the best of my knowledge," he commented, "No one else in the U.S. has developed its own wines by working directly with the winery. The blends vary in composition from year to year and the aromas and flavors which are used in describing a wine can be experienced by all wine drinkers if you really concentrate. To aid us in this task we happily tasted two of the Palmer red wines and two white wines to identify the aroma components we could discern. Moving on in his talk, Scott next showed us by a practical tasting session, involving our sampled wines and a wide variety of food samples, just how much wine influences

DAN'S WINE LIST

Palmer Vineyards end-of-season wine dinner succeeded on both an alimentary and elementary level, as guests were treated to superbly matched wine and cuisine as well as a succession of fundamental lessons valuable to anyone interested in wine appreciation. The accompanying voice of Toby Altman added another note of sophistication to one of the North Fork's premier events of the summer. p. 47.

Avid wine lovers on the East End put Lenz' claim of equality to a top French producer to the test: an informal, but carefully-constructed taste test. Lenz lovers will not be surprised at the outcome. p. 51.

It's an established tenet of the wine world that brilliant restaurateurs will set up shop where outstanding vines flourish. Napa Valley is the obvious example in America, but the North Fork is gaining. Cutchogue's sublime Wild Goose is a game addition to the region's escalating culinary profile. p. 52.

The most popular red grape of Long Island took center stage at Lenz Winery's annual Merlot Classic. p. 55.

Thanks to two prominent shorelines, diners have little difficulty finding North Fork restaurants offering spectacular vistas. Where Bistro Blue succeeds is in combining the splendor of its natural setting with an urbane atmosphere once night rolls in. You can even say, "Shaken, not stirred," with a straight face. p. 57.

Winners At Lenz Chardonnay Festival Hold Their Own Wine Tasting

By Roy Bradbrook

Back in August when Claire and Jim McCarthy of Manorville were the fortunate winners of the top prize at the Lenz Chardonnay Festival and were presented with a bottle of Le Montrachet, one of the world's most highly rated white wines and a bottle of Lenz Gold Label Chardonnay, they thought about the best way to obtain the maximum enjoyment from this windfall.

Now, they could simply have used them as the mood took them to drink either with a meal at home or simply by themselves but they had other ideas. They both are regular wine drinkers and also people who like to learn about wine, which was the prime reason for their trip to the Chardonnay Festival. "We had seen the recent Lenz advertising comparing their top wines to some of the world's top wines and we thought this was a great opportunity for us to find out for ourselves." So, Claire and Jim invited six lucky friends to their house and they set up their own blind tasting. "We were very careful to ensure that we had clean palates, there were only bread and dry crackers for people at this part of the evening. Everyone knew what the two wines were and we asked them to score on a 1 to 10 scale for sight, smell, taste and mouth feel without discussing the results. Of the people making the tasting, I would say that three have a fairly good knowledge of wine but all of the people taking part enjoy wine and buy it regularly."

Three of the eight succeeded in picking out the Montrachet and the total scores of all of the tasters gave a score of 235 to the Montrachet and 241 to the Lenz wine. Claire's comments on these results were, "We talked about the tasting and our assessment of the wines after we had finished and we all agreed that, if we were faced with the decision of which of these wines to buy, we would all buy the Lenz Gold Label Chardonnay, even if we could afford to buy the Montrachet wine without any hesitation."

THROUGH THE GRAPEVINE

By Roy Bradbrook

Barbara is a native of Shoreham whose career had always been in the financial world in New York City until one day when she dined at a successful new restaurant called Druids in Hells Kitchen. There she met the chef, a wildly extrovert charming Irishman by the name of Frank Coe and to cut the proverbial long story short they now are married and running a very new and interesting restaurant called The Wild Goose in Cutchogue.

From the time that you pull into the car park and enter the restaurant anyone who has traveled thorough Ireland will find it very reminiscent of a country restaurant there. Except for the fact that at this point they are still waiting for their liquor license and no one could imagine an Irish country restaurant without one of those essential items! So, until that time, you are invited to bring your own liquid sustenance.

Frank is a native of Cork who went to France to learn cooking by working his way up the ranks and then he moved to London where he cooked at some very prestigious addresses. After recovering from a very serious car accident which left him in the hospital for almost two years, he decided that his future lay in the US and he initially moved to California to start a new career. From there, he steadily moved eastward, along the way being the private chef to a very senior ex-politician and finally landed in New York where he cooked at Daniel and Bernadin, before being approached to help open Druids.

Frank and Barbara would have loved to open a restaurant in Manhattan but finances dictated otherwise. So, in July, The Wild Goose opened its doors for the first time. "This had been a farmer's bar before," Barbara explained. "The rooms were very dark so we had to make everything bright and airy, while keeping the overall effect of a simple country style. Since we opened on July 21st we have been delighted with the response particularly that there has been so much repeat business. Some of our customers have already been back five or six times which is very encouraging."

In common with many service establishments on eastern Long Island, they have to cope with the seemingly perennial problem of acquiring a trained staff but they are fully in accord about their way of dealing with the problem, "From the very start we have set out to keep our bookings strictly in line with our ability to give customers good service," Barbara went on. "I would sooner not take a booking, than have the guests wait ridiculous times for their tables or end up having their meal not served in a timely, orderly fashion. If we do have to say no to a booking, then hopefully this is merely a booking deferred till a later date. But if we take the booking and we end up with the diners having had poor service, they will go away dissatisfied, however good our food is and then the chances are that they may not return." As she was telling me this, I thought what a wonderfully refreshing attitude this is and one to be commended to some of the more established and famous restaurants here on Long Island!

The Wild Goose
4805 Depot Lane, Cutchogue
734-4145

When you get the chance to talk to Frank, as he dashed in and out of the kitchen, you soon appreciate, that beneath the Irish blarney, he has the heart of a very imaginative and inventive, skillful chef who likes to vary his menu very frequently to avoid boredom and more particularly, to make use of whatever are the best and freshest items available on that day. His dishes are complex but have very clean flavors and are not at all heavy because he does not use any butter or cream in his cooking. He is fanatical about the quality of everything he uses, from salad greens to fish and meat. To me, his approach is reminiscent of an artist, who with expert use of a palette of colors will produce a finished work, that someone artistically challenged, like myself, can only wonder at. Similarly, Frank uses his spectrum of flavors to produce finished works which endear themselves to your palate.

We had absolutely no hesitation in placing ourselves in Frank's hands when it came to the choice of food. Firstly we sampled two of his soups. The gazpacho was very refreshing with all the hints of herbs and spices expected while the watercress soup was intense and full of flavor and indeed a soup for all seasons. As we moved on to the appetizers, we really began to appreciate the inventiveness of the cooking. Smoked eel with foie gras was served with wild boar bacon on baby leaves. If this is on the menu when you visit, then this is highly recommended because this unusual blend really does produce a very satisfying dish. Similarly, smoked goose breast with fresh figs on baby arugula was an exciting blend of flavors which we enjoyed very much. On a simpler note, the gallette of three varieties of beets served with gigante beans and topped with goat cheese was very clean and refreshing and reminiscent of a favorite Greek dish but also here Frank had dressed the dish with a delicate watermelon vinaigrette which provided his signature note.

Now, a slight word of warning - If you order the free range Australian lamb, please do not ask for it to be well done. This is the most delicately tasting lamb that you will ever taste and Frank serves it rare or, not at all! If lamb is your choice, please take it as cooked and you will find it on a par with rare tuna, sushi or seared foie gras in its natural simplicity. The only minus point was for the ratatouille accompanying the dish, which was not as good as the rest of our meal.

The other main course we tried was the loin of Dutch veal served with braised endive, serrano ham, chanterelle mushrooms, asparagus and a cepe sauce. The veal was firm and full of flavor and was very different from the insipid meat we often see and the sauce really added to the total taste of this dish.

For dessert, Frank served us a fresh fig tart with fig ice cream and this was truly exceptional, or so I was told because this time, despite strong protestations, I really only obtained a token taste (sometimes you have to know when to give in!). There were also other tarts on the menu such as apple tart tatin and a fresh plum and pineapple tart and for chocolate lovers a chocolate truffle cake, which we really should have tried rather than the banana and white chocolate clafoutis served with white chocolate ice cream which was good but not marvelous.

We finished our meal with large cups of excellent Colombian coffee and again Barbara made a comment which went to underline the care they both are taking to make every aspect of eating at The Wild Goose totally enjoyable. "The last taste you will take away will be that of our coffee, so that has to be fully up to the standards of Frank's cooking."

This first visit convinced us that The Wild Goose and its charming hosts, Frank and Barbara, are a welcome addition to the growing list of top rank restaurants here on the North Fork. Frank is an excellent imaginative chef, who obviously loves what he does. As he enthused over his own cold cured gravlax salmon, incidentally as good as you will find anywhere in Norway or how he adds an individual touch to his gazpacho by adding a pinch of saffron and cumin to reflect the Moorish influences on Spain or the way he described how he buys specially untreated oranges and lemons to produce his own orange and lemon oils to give that special touch to his soups, the previous likening of his cooking to an art form became even more credible. Frank is an artist with food and moreover he is one artist who should never starve in a garret!

Recommendation:

Fly to The Wild Goose - it will not be a "wild goose chase." (Sorry, could not resist a horrible pun!) You will have an evening of interesting dining with high quality food, appetizers range from $5 to 14 and main dishes from $17 to 26 with desserts at $6. If Frank has time to emerge from the kitchen where he almost single-handedly makes his creations, you will enjoy his exuberant enthusiasm and his dry Irish wit. Barbara will be there managing the front of the house with charm and professionalism and ensuring that the service stays up to their high standards.

We don't have to tell you how good our wine is.

The Wine Spectator did it for us.

At Bedell Cellars, our intuition told us that our '95 Cupola might be one of the most distinguished wines ever produced on the North Fork. This is why we were so pleased when recently the respected Wine Spectator magazine bestowed a score of 90 on this very special wine. A score that is more than a triumph for the skills of our estimable winemaker, Kip Bedell. It is a triumph for Long Island's North Fork, helping to affirm its place among the renown wine producing regions of the world. The '95 Bedell Cellars Cupola, a blend of Cabernet Sauvignon, Cabernet Franc, and Merlot, clearly impressed the experts.

Which leads us to another prediction. The future holds great promise for us at Bedell.

It is just the beginning.

Lenz Wineries Hosts 2000 Merlot World Classic Tasting

By Roy Bradbrook

Having sampled a wide range of chardonnays earlier this year at the Lenz Chardonnay World Classic many people returned in early September for the Fall Classic featuring some 77 merlots from around the world. Twelve of the Long Island wineries were well represented together with well known and not so well known wines from California, Washington, Mexico, Chile, Argentina, Italy and New Zealand. Alas, we had no wines from Pomerol to taste against but there was to be a lucky winner of a bottle of Pomerol's first growth 1997 Chateau Petrus valued at $650, together with a bottle of Lenz Winery's 1997 Estate Bottled Merlot which sells for $55 and which has been one of the subjects of some recent wine tasting comparisons that have given very interesting results and which is the subject of another article in the issue.

This was another excellent occasion for wine lovers to have the opportunity to taste such a wide array of very different wines and to make their own assessment of which suit both their palates and their pockets.

At the end of a pleasant evening and after a number of smaller prizes had been drawn the winner of the main prize, after careful consideration, decided to take the value in Lenz wines, Tom Morgan the national sales manager of Lenz told me afterwards. "They wanted 24 bottles of first class wine, rather than just one," he said with a hint of pride. •

Palmer

Scott is very much involved in the process of formulation. The 97 Crab House Blended red we are serving tonight, for example, was made from 60% merlot, 34% cabernet sauvignon and 6% cabernet Franc."

At this stage of the evening, guests moved out temporarily from their tables to the lawns or to stroll around the periphery of the vines, now full of ripening grapes and safely netted against the depredations of marauding birds, as dusk lengthened on a day that had been picture perfect.

After tables had been quickly reset for dinner, guests returned to put Scott Tarwalter's maxims into play as they enjoyed a gourmet meal catered by the Salamander Gourmet Grocery Store in Greenport. Each of the first two courses were paired with two appropriate Palmer wines and then with the dessert came what, for many, and certainly for me, was the piece de resistance of the evening. Palmer Vineyards has just released its 99 Late Harvest Gewurtztraminer. Now, back in June, courtesy of Tom Drozd, I had the pleasure of tasting this wine while it was still in its barrels and at that time I was extremely impressed. Now that Tom has it safely bottled, the finished product is even better. This wine is not in anyway cloying but has an intense heady aroma of a multitude of spices and tastes of citrus and fruit which go to an exceptionally long finish. This is a true late harvest wine equivalent to a German Beerenauslese because, as Tom explained to me, the grapes were exceptionally ripe with very high sugar contents and showed evidence of 'noble rot' or botrytis (about the only time a fungus is welcome in a vineyard!), which is a prerequisite for making really high quality Gewurtztraminer wines. Because of the small quantity of grapes available and the low yields this is a wine which was only produced in a very small quantity so try it early before it becomes a fragrant memory.

Throughout the evening guests listened and danced to the music of the Toby Altman Jazz group, who really encapsulated the spirit of the evening with their skillful choice of melodies well known and not so well known, many of which were performed by the sultry Ms. Altman.

Palmer Vineyards, in their customarily elegant style, presented a very special evening and as you looked at the happy faces of people eating, drinking, dancing and talking there was no doubt that Palmer Vineyards had presented one of the parties of the summer. •

THROUGH THE GRAPEVINE

By Roy Bradbrook

The first impressions, as you enter Bistro Blue are that you are subterranean but the vista rapidly changes into a sophisticated bar area, leading onto an expansive dining room with beautiful water views over Sterling Marina and Peconic Bay. Dan Giannini is the owner of Bistro Blue and he explained how a successful attorney became involved in the very different field of the restaurant business. "You could almost refer to me as the 'deranged attorney,'" he said with a self deprecating smile. "Some years ago I went into partnership with two chefs and opened Metropolis Bistro in East Setauket and ended up owning it all. Then we had the opportunity to take over these premises, which had been the Portobello restaurant and two years ago we opened Bistro Blue. From the very start our overriding concept has been to give people value and also to provide an ambiance which is the equal of a top city restaurant."

As you take a closer look around, you can see how this has really come true. The dining room, just before the evening rush, is an immaculate picture of blue and white linens, sparkling tableware and elegant glasses and cruet sets. Set these within the decor of yellow walls and blue ceilings, archways and soft lighting and you have surroundings which act visually to stimulate your appetite.

Now, a bistro, to be true to its name, really should be all things to everybody, in that you should feel welcome to have a simple meal or a full dinner and this is very much Dan Giannini's thesis, "We serve a very wide range of food, from wraps to steaks and seafood and everything is prepared to the same high standards," he went on.

"This is a place where diners have no difficulty pronouncing names and we give very clear notes on the ingredients of the dishes. Our menu changes frequently so, when people come here regularly, as many of our guest do, they are not likely to become bored with the menu selection. Because we do get very busy, especially at weekends during the summer, service is very critical to us and we are always working on this aspect of the business."

Dan Giannini was very forthright about his approach to hiring and what he expects from his staff. "The first essential is to make sure that you recruit people who have a functioning brain. This is much more important than experience. I want our staff to be people with 'smarts', intuition and have a personality which works well with our guests. One of the most important things for them to learn is how to 'read' a table. Every set of diners is different and it is important to be able to understand their needs and to meet their expectations."

Bistro Blue has, as one of its specialties, a comprehensive range of martinis, designed to suit all tastes. The 'James Bond' came 'shaken not stirred' and was pronounced correctly dry and strong. I requested a chef's selection of appetizers and main courses to enable us to sample a wide range of dishes. Our first plate was Prince Edward Island mussels which had been steamed in a white wine, plum tomato, basil and garlic sauce. The mussels were plump and the sauce delicate and flavorful. We had to indulge in some serious bread dunking to make the most of the broth. After this, came calamari, and these were tender but crisp and the tomato and chipotle based sauces added to our enjoyment. Crab cakes were full of crab meat and had the right degree

Bistro Blue
1410 Manhasset Ave, Greenport
477-3940

of spiciness and bite and the accompanying remoulade sauce was excellent. The presentation of the escargots in a bread bowl was novel but this was one dish where we both felt that a stronger level of seasoning would have been preferable.

Bistro Blue offers an interesting range of salads and we tasted the warm spinach salad served with mushrooms, roasted garlic, pancetta, pine nuts and dressed with balsamic vinaigrette and the arugula and endive salad with blue cheese, pecan brittle and fresh berries in a herb Dijon vinaigrette. These were both excellent and very different in taste with the first having a satisfying deep taste and the latter very light and fresh with the classic contrast of fruit and cheese. However, we felt that the salad would be even better with a shaved parmesan reggiano rather than the blue cheese which tended to dominate the total taste of the dish.

Pan seared salmon served with cockles, asparagus, yellow tomatoes and a shellfish broth was very moist and clean tasting as was the macadamia crusted snapper served with mesclun, mandarin oranges and a lime wasabi vinaigrette.

A perfectly cooked filet mignon was topped by horseradish crust and complemented an excellent piece of tender and tasty steak. One of the simplest dishes on the menu turned out to be our favorite of the evening. A pan seared chicken breast came with olives, mushrooms, tomatoes and artichoke hearts and was served with roasted new potatoes which were absolutely cooked to perfection. This was a great demonstration that food does not have to be exotic to be mouth wateringly good!

This gave us another opportunity to talk some more with Dan, as we relaxed and digested. By this time the sun had set and the restaurant was subtly lit and had taken on another aura as the influence of the sea gave way to that of the city. "We try to make everyone who comes here comfortable. We do not dictate when or what guests should eat. It is important that they feel totally relaxed and can appreciate the total atmosphere of Bistro Blue. If we do this we succeed," was Dan's summary. "I try to lead by example and I suppose that I am a boss who does everything. My style has always been the carrot and not the stick." This was obvious from watching how the room operated during a busy evening and from talking to our very helpful and knowledgeable server, Kristen who was very complimentary about the way that the staff are treated, a feeling which is, unfortunately, not always a part of restaurant life.

After this pause, we decided that we still were able to try one of the delectable desserts and we relied on Kristen for our choice. When the dark chocolate bag filled with raspberry mousse, fresh whipped cream and served with seasonal berries appeared on our table, it was obvious that we had trusted the right person because this was a very different and very very enjoyable dessert, beautifully presented and one that all chocaholics will enjoy and even share, for really this is a dish for two.

Bistro Blue's dishes range from $7 to $11 for appetizers, pizzas and wraps and from $15 to $37 for main courses. They have a sensibly priced range of wines by the glass or by the bottle and Dan Giannini is a supporter of Long Island wines and plans to carry even more of these next year based on the demand for them and their ever increasing quality.

Recommendation:

Now, if this review has tempted you to rush to Bistro Blue, as I hope it might, because this is truly a restaurant which delivers even more than it promises, in both surroundings and food, then hurry because Bistro Blue will close for the season from November to next April. However, if you miss out or if you want to continue eating a la Bistro Blue, you can always run out to East Setauket where Metropolis Bistro, under Consultant

Chef Jeffrey Baruch, will be open all winter. The other good news is that Bistro Blue hopes to have a new outdoor deck seating about 60 people when it reopens next spring.

Shop 'til You Drop ... With Maria Tennariello

Well, before you know it the ghosts and goblins will be here. I took my grandson Anthony Halloween costume shopping along with my mom who went clothing shopping. What a day! Let's shop...

Starting in Southampton, Corwin's Jewelers on Main Street is having a "Columbus Day Blow-Out Sale" from October 6 through October 9. Watches are up to 75% off, all colored stone jewelry is up to 60% off, and estate merchandise and gold earrings, chains and bracelets are up to 50% off regular prices. A gal's best friend, diamonds are 10% to 30% off that includes engagement rings, pendants and diamond earrings. It's a cash and carry sale, so get there early.

Also in Southampton on Main Street at Touche Couture stop in for the unique holiday gift's that you have been looking for. There is a sale going on right now, so get going.

For your planting needs, Whitmore's Garden Center & Nursery is having a "Fall Sale" with 40% off on the entire selection of trees and shrubs and selected perennials. Located on Montauk Highway in Watermill, hurry, the early bird always gets the worm!

After looking high and low for an early special Halloween costume for Anthony, we stopped at The Whalebone Store on Noyac Road in Sag Harbor for a look at the largest selection of costumes that I have ever seen. Of course, Anthony found what he wanted:

a Michael Meyer's costume complete with hatchet and liquid blood in a tube. Ugh! I tried to talk him out of that one and be Batman instead. No such luck, Michael Meyers it is... I was thrilled to find beautiful mums in all different colors for $19.95 for the real extra large pots and three for $12 for the slightly smaller pots. I couldn't wait to get home to plant them. Now it feels like fall. The Whalebone Store has unique and special picture frames, wreaths, greeting cards, wrapping paper, candle holders, Halloween decorations and much more. Stop in and say hi to Linda.

If you head over to The Cigar Bar in Sag Harbor this weekend, look for a great tag sale that is going on. Merchandise includes cigar boxes, cigarette making kits, and lots of miscellaneous items.

Also, you will find a "Clearance Sale" at Around Again that includes some household items like furniture rockers, '50's kitchen table, an art deco bedroom set, clothing and more. Located on the Long Wharf in Sag Harbor, this is a great not so little shop.

If you want to spruce up your pet, check out The Blue Frog pet shop on Montauk Highway across the road from the Red Horse Market in East Hampton. The Blue Frog also sells, hand fed exotic birds, reptiles, and kittens for adoption that Christine and Claudia obtained from Elsa's Ark. There are also a variety pet foods, pet clothing, toys and accessories. Get this! How about hand-made aromatherapy products and massage oils for your pooch? Every pet should have a massage once in a while. Call 324-4909 for information.

Want the sale of the century? Go over to Starfish, located in Amagansett Square for the "Sweater Insanity Sale" that is going on right now. You will find great deals on rayon chenille sweaters that normally sell for $150, now selling for $39., cashmere and silk sweater sets that retail for $195. Selling now for only $75. The cotton sweaters are flying out the door at 2 for $40., that sold originally for $70. Each. And keep in mind that these are designer sweaters. I have been to this sale at Starfish before, and this is one sale not to missed! Starfish is also having a "Going out of the Antiques Business Yard Sale", this weekend. Many of the merchandise is priced at $5. And under. Everything must go in order to make more room for her new clothing, many designer fashions at discount prices. Call Lorraine for information at 267-3455. My mom and I left with four shopping bags full to the top. Oh well, I better get a raise!

Time running out, I don't want to be late for my appointment at Arline's Salon at the Omni. I have my mom scheduled for a manicure, pedicure and a hair make-over. Whew, what a day! Call Arline's for appointments at 283-7472.

Until next week. Ciao and Happy Shopping!

COLLEGE DAZE

The applications have arrived. As the stack on your desk grows higher and higher, it becomes increasingly difficult to pretend like those applications aren't there for a reason. In order to quiet your nerves and those of your parents, you decide to pull out the first application. This is a breeze, you think, as you quickly write in your contact information and SAT scores. Upon turning the page, you stumble upon the personal statement. At this point you begin to panic. What in the world am I going to write my essay about? Do I even want to go to this school? And even if I was accepted, would I be able to afford it? Don't fret, check out the Internet!

THE SCOOP:

www.usnews.com - Looking for a list of the best schools in the country? Listed under different categories ranging from most international to the best southern liberal arts colleges, here you will find the rankings and statistics of all the top colleges and universities. Don't miss the "College Personality Quiz" to find your perfect match!

www.embark.com - This comprehensive site guides you through every step of the college admissions process, from researching prospective schools to getting ready for the big move. Sign up for a "locker" to manage online college applications, take standard test prep courses and email admissions staff.

www.collegelink.com - The site that will meet all of your pre-college needs. Articles written on college tours, scholarships, and how to make your final decision will steer you in the right direction. The college "planner" breaks down the application process month by month, so you can be sure you are right on schedule.

www.campustours.com - Looking for a clear picture of exactly what a school looks like? Check out this site for clear and accurate online tours of almost any college. Make sure you take a virtual tour, if possible, for an unbelievable lifelike view of the action.

THE DREADED APPLICATION AND ESSAY:

www.writingweb.com - Though a paid service, writingweb.com offers helpful essay-writing advice to those applying to the most prestigious universities. For a fee, a writing tutor will provide you with a one or two page written evaluation on your essay, including notes on your grammar, essay structure, and ideas.

www.personalessay.com - How would you like to write the essay that can guarantee admission to the university of your choice? Written by an editor who taught essay writing to high school students, this site offers helpful guidelines for writing your personal essay. Further assistance is offered for a fee, however, the list of do's and don'ts is helpful for starters.

FINDING THE FUNDING:

www.absolutelyscholarships.com - There is a scholarship out there for everyone, it is just a matter of finding it. Search this site's database of over 20,000 scholarship awards based on your interests, background, and aspirations. Access to the database is completely free and yields results in just a few minutes.

www.estudentloan.com - Research and compare student loans on this easily-managed site. Being free of bias and presenting knowledgeable advice on the college loan process, estudentloan.com allows lenders and borrowers to meet on equal ground. Parents can check out their link for advice and information on the financial aid process.

ART COMMENTARY

With Marion Wolberg Weiss

"VISUAL Vernacular" AT ARLENE BUJESE GALLERY

Art exhibits that are centered around a theme can be very illuminating and stimulating; the present show at East Hampton's Arlene Bujese Gallery is no exception in this regard. No matter what its detractors say, theme shows don't have to be vague/misleading, forcing works to fit a particular category. (Believe it or not, this thematic vs. chronological focus is a current debate concerning the London's Tate Modern, where themes are the focus.)

While the exhibit at Arlene Bujese's is thought-provoking as a thematic venue (pieces are not forced to conform to a particular category), the title, "Vernacular," could be misleading, nonetheless, if it's signifying the concept of narrativity or story telling.

If the word "vernacular" is to be taken at face value, its denotative meaning is that which is "expressed in the native language of a place." Examples could include slang, argot or any number of sub languages. In art, this definition suggests aesthetics that are indigenous to a particular artist: those elements which express his/her origin, a kind of visual "signature" (including physical, emotional, or spiritual aspects). Literal words on a canvas are not necessary, therefore, for this definition.

There are exceptions. Jeff Dell's series with the words, "On" and "No," are literal and figurative expressions of the artist's vernacular, where he's often personally and professionally provocative. Stephanie Brody

Piece by Stephanie B. Lederman

Lederman's "From Night Into Day" is an especially potent example where words also represent the artist's vernacular, signifying her unique way of composing life experiences through paradigmatic forms: events and experiences are not chronological, but must be figured out to make sense. Therefore, there's a reason why some letters in the artist's sentences stand above the line.

Darlene Charneco's "Languaging" also directly addresses the vernacular in a denotative manner where nails replace literal sentences. It's an arresting thematic interpretation, to be sure.

Most of the exhibit, however, uses vernacular to signify the artist's identifying signature. This critic's favorites include Stanly Kearl's remarkable bronze sculptures "Twins" and "Joan of Arc"; Ronald Stein's extraordinary "Saint Francisco of Assisi" and "Saint Ignatius Loyola"; and Teddy Gavenchak's "The Golden Bear." In all these cases, there's a recurring homage to the artist's place/origin, whether it be a real one (as in Lederman's and Gavenchak's biographical/ experiential works) or a spiritual one (in Stein's art).

The current exhibit will be on view until October 15.

HONORING THE ARTIST: CUCA ROMLEY

There are two things that immediately strike you about artist Cuca Romley: one is her unusual name and the other is how her personality reflects such a name. Try as you will, there's no easy way of figuring out Ms. Romley's national origin. It's even hopeless to try because she is, in fact, a person who has lived in many different countries and speaks four languages. Simply put, she is a woman of the world.

Ms. Romley's personality also represents a varied nature, one that is not easy to categorize. Like the name Cuca suggests, she is full of energy and has led a unique life.

Ms. Romley grew up in Madrid, across the street from a park and near the famous Prado Museum; her love of both art and nature perhaps deriving from this location. She left Spain when she was fairly young, spending time in Italy where she studied art and in Paris where she took painting courses at the Beaux Artes.

Of those early days, Ms. Romley notes that "I always knew I'd leave Spain what with Franco in power; it was just a matter of where I would go. Italy was the closest country, and it was always a dream of mine

It's Columbus Day weekend and an entertainment-filled week on the East End. Two masterful popular music performers, jazz pianist Judy Carmichael and award-winning cabaret entertainer Steve Ross, will offer two shows at Bay Street Theatre on Saturday night. Patricia Watt's Manhattan Drama Collective has a preview performance of Warren Leight's new musical in East Hampton late Saturday afternoon, and the Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center has a dual performance by two mellow, best-selling rock groups on Sunday evening, Poco and Firefall.

The Hamptons International Film Festival begins next Wednesday. There is a schedule of films in this issue and more information at their website, www.hamptonsfest.org. More than 130 programs are scheduled including new independent feature films, new documentaries, seminars, panel discussions, and special presentations such as Ed Harris's portrayal of East Hampton painter Jackson Pollock in Pollock and David Mamet's film State and Main. Tickets can be ordered now by telephone (631-324-4600), faxed requests (631-324-5116) or by visiting the film festival office at 66 Newtown Lane, East Hampton (631-329-9951).

The Hampton Day School's annual Potato Festival is Saturday in Bridgehampton (raindate Sunday) and the annual Taste of Montauk fall festival is Sunday afternoon on the village green. The Amy Award to an emerging young poetess will be presented at Guild Hall on Saturday afternoon, and Dan Rattiner will be at Book Hampton, East Hampton, on Saturday with his only-in-the-Hamptons collection of cartoons (Ballet Parking). An "I Survived the Summer" party at Sag Harbor's Paradise Café next Thursday benefits the Have-A-Heart Community Trust. For details on these and other events, read on:

THEATER

The Manhattan Drama Collective presents its final fall new-play reading at the Mulford Farm barn on Saturday at 4 p.m. It is a musical play co-written by

Take Five 2000 with Jan Silver

Warren Leight, Fame Takes A Holiday, opens at La Mama on October 26. Local tickets go on sale at the East Hampton Historical Society's Mulford Farm restoration, on James Lane off the village green, at 1 p.m. ($20 each). Seating is on backless benches. A reception with the cast and producer (Patricia Watt) follows the performance.

Sag Harbor's Bay Street Theatre offers its acting technique workshop course starting this Saturday from 10 a.m. until 1 p.m. Running for six Saturdays, the course is taught by two experienced professional actors, Bay Street co-founders Stephen Hamilton and Emma Walton. The workshop is $285 and admission is by interview; call (631) 725-0818.

MUSIC

Bay Street Theatre's fall weekend series resumes with the dual piano performance of jazz master Judy Carmichael and the "crown prince of New York cabaret," Steve Ross. She is a stride, boogie, swing and New Orleans-style specialist and he is known for his interpretations of Cole Porter and Noel Coward songs. I hope they will perform some of the music from their joint "Cole Porter Meets Fats Waller" show. There are two shows at Sag Harbor's Bay Street Theatre on Saturday (7 p.m. and 9 p.m.) and Ms. Carmichael will offer a concert geared to children, "Musical Beginnings," at 1 p.m. For tickets to the evening programs ($32) or the children's program (free to children, $10 for adults), call the Bay Street box office at (631) 725-9500. (The Mermaid Theatre of Nova Scotia will present two classic children's stories as puppet shows on Sunday at Bay Street Theatre, 11 a.m. and 2 p.m.)

The Backman-Klibonoff-Friedman Trio will play selections from the classical chamber music repertory at the Shelter Island Presbyterian Church, Route 114, on Saturday at 8 p.m. For information, call (631) 749-1488.

Two mellow rock bands with several hit recordings, Poco and Firefall, will give a concert at the Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center on Sunday at 8 p.m. Poco's better-known hits include "Crazy Love" and "Heart of the Night." Firefall originated the hit songs "You Are the Woman," "Just Remember I Love You," and "Strange Way." Call the box office at (631) 288-1500 for tickets.

Some of my favorite performers at the local clubs and restaurants are the Kipling Trio (pop standards and mellow jazz at Kipling's, Bridgehampton, Friday), the Lone Sharks (classic rock and rockabilly, often at Bridgehampton's The Wild Rose), the Dennis Raffelock Trio (Bridges, Bridgehampton, Saturday), pianist Hunky Page (weekends, Sag Harbor's American Hotel), and the Cardinali-Gene-Salter trio (jazz at Oyster Pond Restaurant in Montauk on Friday, jazz brunch at World Pie, Bridgehampton, on Sunday). Amagansett's Stephen Talkhouse has the all-woman Antigone Rising (from the Lilith Fair tour) late Friday and Felicia on Fire late Saturday evening.

SPEAKERS

The Amy Award, named after Paula Trachtman's young poetess daughter Amy Rothholz, is presented at Guild Hall each year to an upcoming poetess less than 30 years old. This year's winner is Lacy Schultz, born in Nebraska, who recently completed an MFA at Bennington and now works in Manhattan. Her poems have been published in several reviews. Accomplished poet/painter/novelist Siv Cedering of East Hampton will read from her work, along with Ms. Schultz, at the

Guy de Fraumeni's HOLLYWOOD in The Hamptons

SAFETY FILM IS NOT AN ACCIDENT

Hey, you in the seat up front. Don't you know! Movie going can be dangerous! Here we are, joy riding scandalously in this huge highly complex entertainment machine without ever having looked at an instruction manual. This is not to say that you will necessarily have a breakdown or crack up but let's put it this way . . . the mind is a terrible thing to have to re-build. Let us not get involved in the wrist-slapping, head on collisions in Washington threatening movie regulations. Instead I will clumsily dodge the messy pile-ups, as they eventually must, by reviewing two very, safe and sane road trips.

SOFT ROCKING THE CRADLE

Almost Famous is mostly just Almost. It never gets you to a real destination, attempting as it does to be a "trip" into the 1973, bell-bottomed, rock band kind-of way. With much cordiality, it abandons you on the side of the road in a lilac, flowery painted, VW bus. . . , misty eyed, musk redolent (more wimpy-sweet than acidic) and dazed . . . more by what the film doesn't say than by what it does say. It is a coming-of-age. love of Rock and Roll story of, what seems to me to be, a permanently PRE-pubescent lad who will never outgrow behaving like a teeny-bopper and, getting unstuck from Bubble Gum Rock music left on his bedpost at night. Almost Famous is so affectionate, so forgiving, so reverently haloed with innocence and so irrevocably devoted to the power of popular music, it has its audience weak at the knees with LOVE and PEACE. It even has some critics in waves of raves, even as they admit its timidity and intense self-censorship of seriousness . . . artistic and otherwise. Also, it has Dreamworks engaged in the type of hyperbolic hype that sent American Beauty to its Academy Awards. You'll no doubt, love its seat-belted safe hugs. I found them as too constraining. Some of the essence of the time was abandonment. Dangerous thrills and experimentation . . . creatively and sexually. . . accompanied the music like today's Rap lyrics. Almost, plays them all very sweetly.

Almost Famous Woman On Top

DELICIOUSLY PALATABLE - NOT SO HOT

My second film is also a charmingly Fairy Tale, but Woman on Top boasts of its Never Never Land of soothing qualities. Like Almost, this movie is given shape and emotion by music. It's music is the irrepressibly swaying and romantically soft Bossa Nova. Just as beguiling is its location, Bahia, as is another of the films exotic ingredients - Spicy, peppery Brazilian cuisine. The main dish is, of course, the Woman on Top, embodied by its lovely star Penelope Cruz, as Isabella, a fantastic chef, lover and looker who, with a little help from a Goddess of the Sea cannot walk down the street (to a Samba beat) without attracting a following of hundreds of men.

Her problem, only one and a BIG ONE, is motion sickness. She has to be in the driver's seat, even in a Taxi . . . on top of everything or else she up-chucks. Always having to be On top means that her loving husband can never say "I love You" in the age-old, usual Position of intercourse. So, after a few years, he's getting on top of a few women who can subserve and she, outraged leaves their home and restaurant, a thriving business because of her cooking and his entertaining. She goes to San Francisco and moves in with her Fairy God Mother. Yes, a pun is intended, he is Monica, a drag queen whose outfits make Carmen Miranda and Cher look like Paula Jones. . . before the settlement. As portrayed by Harold Perrineau, Jr., Monica (the narrator and counselor to the lovers) gives a bit of heat to the merely 2-Alarm Chili zippiness and attractive mild spell.

ALMOST IS ALSO NOT SO HOT

The wispy, gnome-like P'il hero of Almost Famous, Willie, also leaves home but, at the age of 15 to be a reporter covering a rock band called, Stillwater, on tour. There he meets his Fairy God Mother a 16 year old groupie, Penny, who guides him through his initiations into the world of the rolling stone and stoned. He also gets advice, a pat on the head and a kick in the pants from his mentor, the great critic, Lester Bangs, of Cream Magazine. Phillip Seymour Hoffman is an inspired Lester. Sad and skinny and sweet-street-smart, Penny, is Kate Hudson. William, the intelligent young writer-to-be is William Fugit. His name looks oddly like a name common in that wonderfully out-spoken naked time. Does anybody remember the Fugs? Billy Crudup (gee, another 70's sounding name) is the star of Almost and lead guitarist of Stillwater and Jason Lee is the Almost fiery, lead singer.

Everything about Almost Famous is almost. This film of Cameron Crowe's is almost as good as Jerry McGuire. His almost autobiographical counterpart almost looks like Barry Manilow. Maybe that's why the film seems so teen-scene-sentimental-Sappy.

Guy-Jean de Fraumeni is the producer of award-winning films for ABC, NBC, PBS and European Feature Films. He has judged the major motion picture and TV award Competitions. He is assisted in his column by Sarah Halsey.

INTERNATIONAL FILM FESTIVAL

A Taste Of The Hamptons Film Festival

East Hampton, Westhampton Beach and Sag Harbor sidewalks will be invaded by the "indie" film crowd from October 11 through 15 while the eighth Hamptons International Film Festival is underway. Don't let the dark-clothed, intense visitors from the world of independent filmmaking deter you from attending a few of the 130 screenings, seminars, panels and parties going on for five days.

Here is a quick overview of new films and programs at the Festival, what actors and directors are expected to attend, and how to purchase tickets. (A schedule is included in this issue of Dan's Papers.)

Programming for the Festival falls into several categories: Spotlight films (independent features by famous writers, directors and/or actors), Golden Starfish feature film competition (independent films by first- or second-time filmmakers), Golden Starfish documentary competition, world cinema (international films), films for families, shorts, student films, archival films (classics that have been restored), special presentations, films of conflict and resolution, panel discussions with distinguished film professionals.

The four spotlight films to be screened before opening in theaters around the country are: Dinner Rush, a comedy about the world of New York City's trendy eateries, with Danny Aiello, Edoardo Gero and Sandra Bernhard; Shadow of the Vampire, a fictional account of the making of a vampire film, with John Malkovich and Willem Dafoe; The Simian Line about the love life of four different couples (including two ghosts), stars Lynn Redgrave, William Hurt, Cindy Crawford, Harry Connick Jr., Samantha Mathis, Tyne Daly, Eric Stoltz and Jamey Sheridan; and State and Main, writer/director David Mamet's screwball comedy about a movie crew descending on a quiet New England town, featuring Alec Baldwin, Philip Seymour Hoffman, Rebecca Pidgeon, William Macy, Sarah Jessica Parker, Charles Durning and Patti LuPone.

The Special Presentation this year is to Ed Harris, the actor, director and driving force bringing the turbulent life of abstract expressionist painter Jackson Pollock to the screen. Pollock will have two screenings midday Saturday, October 14, at the UA East Hampton Cinemas. A discussion with Ed Harris and Newsday's chief film critic John Anderson will follow at Guild Hall. The film also stars Marcia Gay Harden as Pollock's painter wife Lee Krasner, and Val Kilmer has a cameo role as painter Willem deKooning. (Jackson Pollock and Lee Krasner lived in the Springs section of East Hampton. Their home, where a few of the movie's scenes were shot, is now the Pollock-Krasner Museum and Study Center.)

century musicologist who creates problems when she goes to Appalachia to study the mountain songs and traditions. The closing film is Spring Forward, focusing on the special relationship that develops between two small-town parks department workers. The film stars Ned Beatty and Liev Schreiber.

The five independent feature films for first- or second-time filmmakers competing for the $180,000 Golden Starfish Feature Film award are: Matthew Tabak's thriller Auggie Rose (with Jeff Goldblum and Anne Heche); Mia Trachinger's comedy Bunny; Dan Cohen's comic drama Diamond Men (with Robert Forster, Donnie Wohlberg, Bess Armstrong); Dani Minnick's coming-of-age story Falling Like This; Abraham Lim's drama Roads and Bridges; and Michael Bregman's caper comedy Table One. Most of the Golden Starfish films are having their world premieres at the Festival.

The Golden Starfish Documentary award has five films entered including Burning Man: the Burning Sensation, Alex Nohe's coverage of the summer's outrageous Burning Man festival in Utah. There are more than a dozen World Cinema films such as Hans Peter Moland's Aberdeen, starring Stellan Skarsgård and Charlotte Rampling, and Shirley MacLaine's Bruno, about a cross-dressing young boy competing in a Catholic school's spelling bee. The two classic Archival Films to be screened are Ernst Lubitsch's silent Eternal Love, and Marshall Neilan's 1918 Stella Maris starring Mary Pickford.

The "View from the East End" section is five feature films shot on the East End by local filmmakers. In a series called "Close Encounters," there will be informal discussions with featured actors such as Danny Aiello, Ned Beatty, Sandra Bernhard, William Hurt, and Aidan Quinn led by well-known film studies professors Richard Brown and Eugene Hernandez at Guild Hall.

The "Films of Conflict and Resolution" will concentrate on different trouble spots around the globe. This year's area is the Middle East, and fifteen films created by Arab and Israeli filmmakers will be shown. There is a $25,000 prize for the best film or films depicting the humanity and issues of conflict in the troubled region. This category begins a ten year commitment between the Festival and the Appeal of the Nobel Peace Laureates Foundation to fund the award.

Then there are the panel discussions, the student films, the short films (some coupled with feature films) and the new Digital Café, Cablevision's drop-in place for coffee, free high-speed Internet service, and a demonstration of the latest digital equipment for filming, sound mixing and editing. Of course, there are parties every night....

The venues for all these programs are the East Hampton Cinemas, Guild Hall, Sag Harbor Cinema and Westhampton Beach Performing Arts Center. Tickets range in price from $10 for individual films, $15 for panel discussions, $25 for opening or closing night films and special presentations, $75-$100 for the evening parties, to $400 for a Preferred Pass and $1000 for a Founder's Pass (unlimited access to all programs and reserved seating). Tickets are available at the Festival office, upstairs at 66 Newtown Lane (631-324-4600) or by calling or faxing the ticket office (631-329-9951 or fax 631-324-5116 with a credit card.

"On The Bench," Local Film at Hamptons

Reality TV arrives at the East End — it was bound to happen sooner or later. True, the short film, On the Bench, is not a television series, but a documentary in this year's Hamptons International Film Festival. Even so, it shares a lot in common with Survivors.

Aren't the Hamptons located on an island (well, almost) where year-round residents try surviving all kinds of challenges? Isn't the format of On the Bench unscripted, too, with non-actors? (A catch-as-catch-can parade where locals pass by a bench in front of Dreesen's Market to chat with filmmakers Jeff Dell and Charlie Glassman.) Isn't there also an interactive experience between the viewers and the "characters" when the audience plays a guessing game? (Counting how many people they know in the film, just like Dell and Glassman had been doing.)

We don't think director/editor Dell, Glassman or Dr. Paul Cohen (the photographer who's really a dentist) had The Survivors in mind, however. Yet the film still works as satire or parody of Candid Camera or any number of movies/TV shows which capture people being themselves. The piece could also be a wry comment on East Hampton itself— its status as a haunt for the rich and famous (more than once Dell yells at an anonymous passerby, "Mr. Spielberg").

The camera isn't always interested in celebrities. There are also the "normal" locals, like Rose and Elliot, two single, older people who are introduced to each other by Dell. Dell as a matchmaker, provocateur, and observer presentation on Saturday, 3 p.m. There is no admission charge, and a reception follows the program.

Canio Pavone, founder of Canio's Books, has not been idle since he turned over his unique book store to Maryann and Kathryn. He returns to Sag Harbor on Saturday at 6 p.m. to read—in English and Italian—from the work of three contemporary Italian poets he is translating for publication. Dan Rattiner, editor/publisher and prolific writer, will be at Book Hampton, East Hampton, on Saturday at 5:30 p.m. with his book of very funny Hamptons cartoons, Ballet Parking. The annual Soros Distinguished lecture at the Parrish Art Museum is this Saturday afternoon. Architect Chad Floyd will present the concept and current plans for the renovation and expansion of the museum.

SPECIAL EVENTS

The Hampton Day School's annual Potato Festival is a family day filled with potato races, games, and foods. It goes on Saturday from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Butter Lane, Bridgehampton, campus (raindate Sunday).

The "Taste of Montauk" fall festival will take place on Sunday from noon to 4 p.m. on the village green. There will be special dishes from many of the village's fine restaurants, lively music and a Chinese auction. There is no admission charge but proceeds from the food sales and auction will benefit restoring the Montauk Playhouse as a community center. For more information, call (631) 668-230.

The book-lined Paradise Café is the site for the "I Survived the Summer" celebration next Thursday, starting at 6 p.m., for the Have-A-Heart Community Trust. Paradise chef Stephen Putnam will offer a buffet of hors d'oeuvres, drinks and desserts. The tables will be pushed back for music and dancing. For tickets ($35 donation), call (631) 329-5480.

to live in Paris. Although my mother left when I was eleven years old, my father was always supportive of my art."

Ms. Romley maintained contact with her mother; when she initially left for Italy, it was to see her mother for one month. She ended up staying for two years. She also traveled to Switzerland with her parent. (Ms. Romley continues to travel a lot with her own daughter.)

Ms. Romley's early experiences living in different countries gave her a sense of independence and a penchant for following her dreams, although there were certain problems along the way. "I studied theatre and costuming in Italy," she explains. "But when I went to Paris, there was no such thing at my school so I changed to painting."

Love of theatre and costumes has continued to be a part of Ms. Romley's life, however. "I created a ballet," she recalls with enthusiasm, "and I design furniture. I designed my own chairs and a canopy bed; it took me ten years to find someone to build it."

Love of nature has also always been important to

Ms. Romley. Her furniture (including her canopy bed) is made with tree branches; her jewelry and gates are patterned after designs in nature as well.

Favorite subjects for the artist's work also derive from nature. She has just completed a painting of Central Park South and her East Hampton scenes include places like the town pond. The cover on Dan's Papers is not about nature, per se, but reflects Ms. Romley's interest in history. An earlier version of the cover was the same East Hampton train station at the turn-of-the-century. This new painting represents a more updated version with the modern train now in operation.

Ms. Romley continues to work on a variety of projects, many mirroring the things she cares about most. "I'm always busy," she says. "I have so many ideas, but not enough time to do them all. That's better, at least, than having a lot of time but not many ideas."

—Marion Wolberg Weiss

Ms. Romley can be reached at 212-986-2220.

plays multiple, fascinating roles. (He's also a painter whose work is currently at the Arlene Bujese Gallery down the street from the film's location.) And did we mention that as owner of a prestigious New York post-production company, Dell has been responsible for many an award-winning commercial.

Perhaps it's that last role that makes On the Bench an easy-to-watch series of vignettes which is both authentic and "commercial," meaning well edited and articulated. Naturally, we could do without Dell's shots of women's behinds (and other parts). Scratch that. It's part of the satire. Dell always did have a way with "pushing buttons." His three-decades' old anti-war film (which featured a man sitting on a toilet in the middle of a field) still contains one of this critic's favorite images.

We don't know how many non-locals will appreciate the filmmakers' intent (and hard work—it took four days to shoot the various scenes with equipment often not operating). All we know is, the movie is a hoot.

—Marion Wolberg Weiss

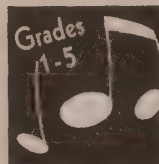

On the Bench will be shown at the Hampton Film Festival on Friday, October 13 at 9 PM.

NOFA, the Northeast Organic Farm Association, held its annual event at the Green Thumb, the organic farm in Water Mill on Saturday, Sept. 23rd. Multi-generational residents and weekenders participated in this fun and food-filled afternoon. Joining them were several farm families and sponsors to celebrate and to support awareness of the growing number of farmers committed to environmentally and economically sustainable farms.

Chef/owner Todd Jacobs of Tierra Mar in Westhampton dazzled us with his grilling techniques as he demonstrated how to grill filets of salmon, striped bass, butterflied chickens, grilled vegetables and corn in their husks, in addition to his spectacular preparation of braised fennel in carrot broth. Several other local chefs and restaurants participated in this all organic event. Among them were chef John Wayne Voisine, of Basilico's in Southampton, who offered a flavorful and smooth Vichyssoise, the cooling potato and leek soup. Sean Ragan, sous chef of the retro-chic Crazy Dog restaurant in Westhampton Beach, served up a bright gazpacho, beautifully blending the many flavors into one.

Larry Halsey, one of the Halsey sons, treated kids of all ages to hayrides around the grounds of the farm property. Like a pair of pied-pipers, Heidi Rose and Susan Fehrenbach, gathered the youngsters from around the farm to show them the art of milking their herd of goats allowing the children to get into the act.

Steven Storch, a Halsey son-in-law, attracted a large group as he held a walking tour to the compost fields on the farm. Mr. Storch, who has a degree in Marine Biology and is a consultant, was a wealth of information as he explained the art of applying bio-dynamics field spray to the ground. As we toured the grounds he literally gave a hands-on lesson in composting passing around samples of composted materials at different stages of development.

NOFA's philosophy is simple, small, local farms hold the key to a safer, healthier, more environmentally sound food supply. With an event such as the one held at the Green Thumb, the message is loud and clear.

TODD JACOB'S LEMON SOY VINAIGRETTE

Todd Jacobs sprinkled this delectable vinaigrette over grilled salmon and striped bass fillets. To accompany the fish Todd pulled up a large container revealing a colorful mix of the Green Thumb's fresh organic vegetables. Tumbling over each other in the basket were butter yellow summer squash, sea green striped zucchini and glossy eggplants with a rosy hue. The vegetables were sliced then painted with a film of oil and seasoned with salt and pepper before grilling. An herb mix of parsley, chives and tarragon were tossed over the vegetables for serving.

Lemon Grass Oil

- 1 pound lemon grass
- 1 1/2 quarts canola oil

For the Vinaigrette

- 1 tablespoon Dijon mustard
- 1/2 cup lemon juice
- 1/4 cup soy sauce
- 1 cup lemon grass oil

1. to make the lemon grass oil crush the woody ends of the lemon grass with a cleaver or the back of a heavy skillet. Place oil and lemon grass in a tall, straight-sided pot. Bring just to the edge of a boil and remove from heat. Set aside in a warm place for 2 hours.

2. After the oil has been infused with the lemony flavor of the lemongrass strain through a fine strainer or a cheesecloth-lined sieve. Bear down on the lemongrass in the strainer to push all of the oil through. Transfer to a glass container (mason jar) and close securely. Can keep refrigerated for up to 3 weeks. Bring to room temperature before using.

3. For the lemon soy vinaigrette, whisk the mustard, and lemon juice in a bowl. Then whisk in the lemon grass oil in a slow steady stream.

Variation: Add 1 tablespoon each minced fresh dill, capers and diced lemon to one cup vinaigrette and serve over grilled salmon or striped bass.

BASILICO'S ORGANIC VICHYSOISE

Chef John Wayne Voisine celebrated NOFA EXPO by creating this classic Vichyssoise using organic potatoes and leeks. This adaptation can be prepared ahead and makes an elegant first course on an early fall menu.

Serves 4-6

- 6 medium leeks, about 2 cups thinly sliced
- 3 tablespoons unsalted butter
- 5 medium Yukon gold potatoes, peeled and quartered
- 6 cups water
- 1 1/2 teaspoons coarse (kosher) salt
- Freshly ground pepper to taste
- 1 teaspoon grated nutmeg
- 2 cups heavy cream or half and half
- 1 Yukon gold potato, unpeeled, scrubbed and diced for garnish

1. Cut away and discard light and dark green layers of the leeks and root ends. Slit in half lengthwise and rinse well. Soak leeks in fresh cold water for 10-15 minutes to rid excess sand. Drain and dry with paper towels and slice thinly.

2. In a 4- to 5- quart saucepan, warm the butter over medium heat. Put in the leeks and saute until tender, about 4-5 minutes. Add the potatoes, water, salt, pepper and nutmeg. Cover and bring to a boil. Reduce heat and simmer, partially covered, until potatoes are tender, about 25-30 minutes.

3. Allow the soup to cool then puree in a blender or with an immersion blender. Chill very well then add the cream or half-and-half and stir to mix. Taste to adjust seasoning if necessary. Refrigerate, covered in a suitable container until ready to serve. Can be prepared up to one day ahead.

4. Cook diced potato for garnish in boiling salted water for about 8 minutes until tender. Sprinkle a teaspoon or two over the chilled soup when ready to serve.

Dining IN THE HAMPTONS

Although its location is unpretentious, let it not be said that Mirko's is an ordinary restaurant. That would be comparable to being sacrilegious. You'd be frowned upon by the steady stream of clientele returning again and again, as well as this reviewer. Make no mistake: Mirko's is very special, having been identified this year as "best in the Hamptons" in The New York Times. Accolades come from other sources, as well, such as the Zagat Survey and Peter Gianotti of New York Newsday.

Creative menus are planned by Croatian Chef Mirko Zagar, he and his co-owner wife Eileen making a great team. They opened the restaurant 16 years ago and have been winning laurels ever since for their versions of European classics.

For instance, try their appetizer Portobello Mushroom "Pizza," which I did on a recent visit. It was served with arugula, goat cheese, caramelized onion and fresh yellow tomato sauce. The best adjective I can think of to describe it is "exquisite." My companion was equally enthusiastic with her first bite of Jumbo Lump Crab Cakes, served with orange basil oil.

Next we had Baby Field Green Salad, prepared with roasted yellow and red peppers, toasted walnuts, gorgonzola cheese and herbal dressing, and also a pasta dish: Rosemary infused Risotto with sun-dried tomato, shrimp and wild mushrooms, which was delectable.

Would you believe that "exquisite" and "delectable" also describe our entrees: my companion selected the Herb Roasted Pork Tenderloin, with apple compote, charred tomato, sweet and sour shallots and balsamic sage sauce. I, the Grilled Salmon, served on herb polenta with sherry vinegar glaze and spicy tomato relish. Chilled Lantz Chardonnay went well with everything, though for those with other preferences mention should be made that Mirko's wine list includes a fine selection of Italian, French, and American wines to complement any meal.

Somehow we managed to save room for desert, though it was difficult to decide which to have from the long list, including such mouth-watering items as the Chocolate Torte, served with coconut ice cream and chocolate sauce, Apple Cream Cake, Local Peach and Blackberry Crisp, Caramelized Oranges with Grand Marnier, a variety of ice cream and sorbets. My companion finally selected the Raspberry Sorbet; I, the Apple Crisp.

It might be of interest to add that we enjoyed our sumptuous meal

on the petite patio, flanked by exotic plants. Some might prefer the intimate inside dining room on chilly fall and winter days. However, no matter which season, you can rely on having a memorable meal and outstanding service performed by the top professional staff from New York City and imports from Hungary and Slovakia.

Upon reflection, I realize that superlatives are not enough—your palate is the best test. So, if you haven't been to Mirko's yet and have a computer, visit their website at www.mirkosrestaurant.com. You could check the menu, as well as prices which run from moderate to high.

Or better still, take a spin out to Water Mill and give it a try. Most likely, as many others have done, you'll want to return time and time again.

It's Our Garden WITH ELIZABETH AND CROW MILLER

CONVERTING ORGANIC WASTES

Compost is really made by micro-organisms (bacteria, yeasts, molds, viruses and fungi's) these micro-organisms must have food to live and to multiply. They need plenty of nitrogen. A compost pile of plain straw and leaves doesn't break down rapidly into humus because it is low in nitrogen. So when you make compost, make sure you add barn-yard manures (cow, horse, pig, goat, sheep, rabbit or poultry are fine to use) or use organic soil amendments such as: fish, cottonseed, blood, soybean, alfalfa or feather meals.

Many gardeners run into trouble because they put into their compost pile weeds and other materials that are too bulky. Not only does it take micro-organisms longer to break down bulky materials, but they tend to prevent the pile from forming a soft, moist mass that will not dry out. Here is where shredding comes in. The finer your compost material is shredded, the more surfaces it will expose to action by micro-organisms.

We must stress turning the compost as an important part of making a good compost. You should turn your pile at least once every 3-days. Since the organisms that heat up compost and break it down rapidly into humus breathe air, turning the pile is important to make sure they have an adequate supply. A compost pile, especially when wet, soon packs down and air is excluded. Composting is not so much the speed of the process but the fact that following these correct principles of compost making tends to insure success.

It is characteristic of compost that unless the pile starts to cook soon after it is made, the chances are it was not made properly and good humus will not result even if you wait a year. Many people have become discouraged because they pile up their garden wastes in the backyard and a year later they still have a pile of garden wastes, not compost.

A compost bin is a nice thing to have, especially if you have a small yard and want the compost area to look as neat as possible. It is important that the bin be built in such a way that access to the compost is easy. It is best to build a large bin and leave an empty space on one side when putting in the compost. That way you will be able to turn the material back and forth within the bin.

The question of bacterial activators still arises. It seems logical to the average organic grower that adding a special culture of bacteria would tend to speed up composting. However, that is not so. Controlled experiments have failed to show any advantage, as there are enough bacteria and other micro-organisms in all plant and animal wastes to inoculate a compost pile. So don't expect to get any benefit from special activators.

A successful organic grower enjoys their work. In fact, composting is a pleasurable occupation for several reasons. In addition to the simple fun of doing something constructive, composting is enjoyable because it is different from the usual run of gardening occupations. But the peak of composting enjoyment is that critical period just after the pile has been made, waiting to see if it will heat up. The work has been done to the best of your knowledge. You have done everything you can for that pile of leaves, weeds, seaweed, grass clippings and vegetable wastes. Now all you have to do is wait to see if it will reward you for your efforts by transforming itself into a mass of the finest, blackest organic plant food known to man.

DOGGIE DISH

if a dog has the disease but veterinarians will often diagnose the disease during physical exam. If you suspect that your dog may have Lyme disease, it is imperative that you seek medical attention immediately. Dogs that are diagnosed and treated promptly are less likely to suffer from arthritis as a result of infection. Treatment means antibiotic therapy and usually your dog will show signs of improvement within forty-eight hours.

Some of the things we can do to control ticks are removing leaves and tall grass from your lawn and keeping your dog out of the woods. Spraying your lawn is always an option, but please know everything you can about the hazards of the products you use before you use them.

If you need to remove an attached tick from your dog or from your own skin, it is extremely important that it is done properly. Special instruments designed specifically for the removal of ticks or even a fine tweezer will help to avoid crushing the body of the tick during the process of removal. To squeeze or crush the body of an infected tick will increase chances of contracting the disease. It is important not only to discuss prevention with your veterinarian, but to also ask for a demonstration or explanation on how to safely remove an attached tick, treatment for the bite area, and how best to dispose of the tick. Discuss the pros and cons of the Lyme Vaccine and what other diseases are carried and transmitted by ticks. To those of you who think that because the summer is over, so is the tick problem and want to know if it is O.K. to stop protecting your dog, my answer is no! Ticks do not die when the warm weather ends. Furthermore, they do not die when the frost begins. So once again, please seek the advice of your veterinarian before you suspend use of a tick prevention.

This generalized information is for the purpose of awareness and what to be concerned about when living in an area prone to tick infestation.

Now let's discuss heartworms. This information pertains to heartworms in dogs only. Heartworms and roundworms are in the same class of worms and are similar in the way they look. However that is the only commonality they have. Tiny larvae (microfilariae) can live in a dogs blood stream for as long as three years. When a mosquito bites an infected animal, these microfilariae grow larger and then move to the mosquito's mouth. Now the mosquito bites the next dog and transmits the larvae to that dog's skin where they will remain for three months and until they are about three inches long. At this time they are ready to migrate to the dog's heart. They will live in the right side of the heart and the large blood vessels connecting from the heart to the lungs. Here they can grow to a length of up to fourteen inches and live up to five years. They may be as many as several hundred heartworms in the heart of an infected dog.

Testing for heartworms in a dog is as simple as having your veterinarian take a blood test. When and how often your dogs should be tested, should be discussed with your veterinarian. It is important that these preventatives are not given to your dog unless you are absolutely sure that your dog is not infected with adult heartworms.

There are many medications available through your veterinarian and only he or she can determine which one is best for your dog. Some of these medications work backwards and some do not. In other words some of these preventatives will kill larvae transmitted to your dog, previous to the given dose, and not larvae transmitted to your dog later in the month or after the dose was given. Please make sure that your have your veterinarian explain this to you so that you are aware a frame of time that your dog is protected. So.... to answer all of you who ask if it is O.K. to stop given your dog the prescribed heartworm preventative because the summer is over... my answer is... no, do not stop until you seek the advice of your veterinarian.

Please remember that this information is for your general knowledge and that as with all health related issues, it is always my strongest recommendation that you seek the advice and care of a veterinarian.

Remember this... no being is as capable of loving or more eager to please, than a dog!

—Jenna Robbins

Now that the summer as at its end, in the last few weeks, clients have been asking about heartworms and tick related health problems and do they still have to be concerned about them.

Living in the Hamptons, one of our biggest concerns in regard to our dog's health, is the problem of ticks and the infamous disease they carry call Lyme Disease. Lyme Disease is transmitted by the deer tick. The cycle of a ticks life begins in the spring when the eggs hatch into larvae. In the summer the larvae will bite an already infected mouse. During the winter, the infected larvae will become a nymph. The nymph will then bite a dog, a human, a deer or even another mouse and infect them. When the nymph becomes an adult it will lay eggs which will hatch the following spring.

For transmission of lyme disease to occur, the nymph must be attached to its host for at least 48 hours. One of the most commonly used preventatives is a once-a-month topical insecticide usually applied to the back of the neck between the shoulder blades. Hopefully, these topical insecticides will kill an unsuspecting tick within this time frame. It is usually recommended that your dog not be bathed or allowed to go swimming for forty-eight hours before and after application of a topical tick prevention. Of course there are many other forms of tick control and your veterinarian's advise should be sought before you decide which one is best for your dog.

Usually, clinical illness will occur within a few months of the transmission from an infected tick. Some of the common symptoms are high fever, possibly 103 to 105 degrees, lameness, swelling of the joints, lethargy and loss of appetite. Please be aware that unlike people, dogs usually do not develop a rash or bulls-eye redness around the bite.

A standard blood test is usually taken to determine

EAST END FARMING WITH JOE GERGELA

Despite a final push from House Republican leaders, Democratic supporters, farmers and small business owners the estate tax lives for another year as the House failed to override President Clinton's veto of legislation ending the punitive "death" tax.

It is unfortunate that a plan with such a broad base of support and with bi-partisan support from Congress that the incremental repeal of the estate tax couldn't become law. After a lifetime of high input costs and low commodity prices, the death tax costs to farm families are literally the last straw. With a House override, estate taxes would have been reduced by about 15% over 10 years until completely eliminated in 2010. While we seek total elimination of the tax, Farm Bureau policy calls for raising the exemption to the first $5 million of an estate, adjust the federal tax brackets, and adjust for inflation. Farm Bureau has urged leadership on both sides of the aisle to maintain the work that has been done to ensure farmers will have a legacy to pass on to their children.

Over 90 percent of U.S. farms are owned by individuals, family partnerships, or family corporations who continually improve their land or buildings with hopes of transferring a successful operation to their sons and daughters. But, when the government comes calling for cold hard cash to pay off the death tax, families are frequently forced to sell the farm piece by piece. Here on Long Island, this unfair tax causes the loss of our prime farmlands much too often. Farmers pay taxes all their lives and it follows them right to their graves. We have carried it as far as we can go this year, but, believe me, we will give it a go with the next Congress. Stay tuned.

Joseph Gergela is Executive Director of Long Island Farm Bureau

Tempo And Timing In The Golf Swing

A little known factor in the golf swing is tempo. Once a golfer has solid fundamentals and a decent back and downswing, tempo becomes the main ingredient to a consistent overall swing. The time it takes from takeaway to impact to strike the golf ball is tempo.

The tempo trainer is a training aide that was developed to measure the time or tempo of the golf swing. During its invention period tour pros and club pros were used as examples for obtaining the tempo time. The time frame for a good consistent swing was found to be in the range of .95 to 1.30 seconds. If the readings were faster than .95 or slower than 1.30, the swing results were inconsistent.

The key thereafter, is to find your own ideal tempo and to keep it within 1/10 of a second variance.

The tempo trainer is one of the many training aides I have used with my students. One student who worked with the tempo trainer has hit all his clubs in his bag well except his driver. I explained to him that his tempo varied significantly. After he used the tempo trainer in his lesson, he understood that tempo greatly affected his timing. The swing with the driver is usually the hardest, because one seeks distance and does not realize it is the longest and lightest club in the bag. The key checkpoints I made the student aware of were the first move going back, and the first move coming down. I pointed out to him to be slow there and then smooth and flawless elsewhere. I saw this student the other day and not only is he hitting the ball longer but now he is hitting it straighter than ever. — Brian Misiewicz

October is National Breast Cancer Awareness Month

Did you know...

Breast cancer is the leading cause of cancer deaths among women ages 40-59. It is the leading cancer site among American women and is second only to lung cancer in cancer deaths. During the year 2000, 182,800 women will be diagnosed with breast cancer, and 40,800 women will die of breast cancer.

The most proven and significant risk factors are being female and getting older. The majority of women with breast cancer have no known significant family history or other known risk factors. Only 5-10% of breast cancers are due to heredity. Most women who are diagnosed with breast cancer survive the disease. If detected early, breast cancer is a curable disease.

Early detection and treatment offer the best chance currently available for surviving breast cancer. The following steps are recommended:

- Annual screening mammography beginning by age 40 and continuing throughout your life.
- Clinical breast examination at least every 3 years beginning at age 20 and annually after age 40.
- Monthly breast self-examination beginning by age 20.

POLICE BLOTTER

Some tennis players in East Hampton visited Steven Felsher's tennis court and left with his net. The Six Pole Highway resident claims that it will cost $1,000 to serve up a new net. It is not known what sort of space-age material the nipped net was made of.

Also in East Hampton, some unruly students decided to adorn the railroad trestles on Stephen Hand's Path and Route 114 with the phrase, "2001 Seniors Rule." Town police found the vandalism just before Homecoming festivities began at East Hampton High School.

The Montauk Flag Filcher struck again. The Atlantic Terrace Resort on Surfside Place reported the loss of a small nautical flag valued at $25. The epidemic of flag thefts appear to be slowing down, as this was the only reported theft, and fifteen other flags at the hotel were left behind.

Also in Montauk, a bar brawl broke out at the Chowder House on West Lake Drive. The restaurant's owner, Robert Devlin, called police to report several drunk men fighting outside his establishment. Several other patrons left as a result of the fracas. Loses, both property and business are estimated at $600; no arrests were made.

Police responded to a strange motorcycle accident at the corner of Noyac Road and Cove Avenue West. Upon arrival, the motorcycle was in the ditch, but the rider was nowhere to be found. The police tried to reach the registered owner of the bike, but were unsuccessful.

The Salon at Water Mill was burglarized, and the thieves took $300. However, they were considerate and left behind some small bills and coins, so that the business could make change in the morning.

On Old Point Road in Southampton, a school bus driver observed a car allegedly passing his bus while it was stopped and letting off passengers, which is against the law and is posted as such in various places. The bus driver got out and took down the license plate number of the offending motorist. The driver of the car allegedly stopped, got out of his car, and assaulted the bus driver. New York State Troopers arrested Xavier I. Eleazer, 26, of the reservation, and charged him with assault in the third degree.

With water views becoming a hot commodity, an unknown pruner came onto a Kenwood Road property and trimmed several trees, which had reached the roof, level with the first story of the house. The resident said that she has been having arguments with a neighbor, who wanted the trees trimmed so that they could have a view. The criminal cropper left a trail where the treetops were dragged up the driveway.

On Pine Street in Southampton, police officers observed a strange transaction. One man handed cash to another in exchange for an object that the buyer quickly put in his mouth. When approached by police, he spit out the object. The buyer claimed that he thought the object was crack, but it didn't taste like it. Apparently, the guy was shafted two ways, he allegedly bought fake drugs, and he was arrested for it. He was charged with loitering for the purpose of obtaining narcotics, a misdemeanor.

A DWI in Hampton Bays is not that strange, but Christopher G. Fitzgerald, 19, of East Quogue, was arrested by town police on Bay Avenue West, when they allegedly found him unconscious behind the wheel. The car was running, in the middle of the road, and there was an open beer next to him and two unopened beers on the floor.

Also in Hampton Bays, drinking and boating was on somebody's mind. An unexpecting boater was on his boat, when somebody pushed a Coke machine off the dock and onto his boat. The boater may have been thirsty, but he did not want a vending machine on deck. The damage caused by the falling machine is estimated at $800. Police are looking for the Coke pusher.

Dan's LETTERS

RECOGNITION FOR WINNERS

Dear Dan,

I am an avid reader of Dan's Papers, but was disappointed this week in the lack of coverage of the Cartier Grand Slam Tennis Tournament.

There were articles written by Jan Silver and Kathleen DeMonchey covering this event. However, neither article mentioned the winners of the mixed doubles tournaments.

The "A" winners were: Kerri Topping and Andrew Sachs

The "B" winners were: Jennifer Adler and Martin Schulman

They received beautiful Cartier trophies, but they should have received some recognition in your paper which was not given.

Sincerely,
Helen Moritz

TAKE FIVE IS INDISPENSIBLE

Dear Dan,

Dan's Papers – edited and published by Dan Rattiner, provides significant and enlightening contributions to the Hamptons. We look forward to reading it every Friday. Dan himself writes comments about the history and development of the area. He gives a zippy description of the annual Artists' and Writers' Softball Game. He gives witty comment on unusual summer residents.

Finally, of interest to me is his description of his recent trip to Cuba, since I am hoping to go there this winter.

I do want to add that the first article I look for in Dan's Papers is Take Five 2000, written by Jan Silver. I plan my week based on her reviews of shows, readings and events. I find her to be perceptive and insightful.

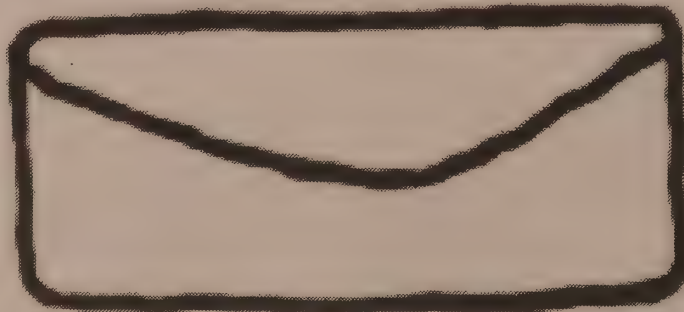

Thanks Dan, for providing this service.

Sincerely,
Howard Richard

RELENTLESS PURSUIT OF THE TRUTH

Dear Mr. Cimisi,

From the bottom of my heart, I thank you for your endless, relentless pursuit of the truth about Flight 800-17.

You are not only my hero, but also of us at TWA. I retired from TWA at JFK after thirty-one years in 1983, and have been in touch with many of my colleagues, now scattered all over the world. We are very proud of "our" airline, which has deep roots in aviation history.

All of us have ties to that airplane, the crew and passengers. I am connected to all three. I flew in that 747 many times. I knew most of the crew, and some of the passengers were neighbors on Long Island.

I also know many of the witnesses, who saw a rocket rising and exploding. After all, we are very familiar with climbing and exploding Grucci rockets of July 4. There are no gimmicks; they go up and bang, they explode! (Rattiner style?)

Efforts of our present Washington team, to prove that a Zippo lighter ignited and burned the house down, would fit well in a children's book, teaching of not to play with matches. Efforts of the DCA team, to discard hundreds of eye observations of a rising rocket, to the level of like seeing a UFO somewhere in a New Mexico desert, is also a degrading sign of opinion of America's intelligence. (Such as opinion surveys, anybody you know was called?)

Now we can only hope that some day, someone will come forward and admit the crime that was committed on the evening of July 17, 1996. I am sure you will be the first journalist to print it.

Yours truly,
N. Alp

DEPARTING VAUDEVILLIANS?

Dear Dan,

So sorry to hear about the possibility of Alec and Kim moving on if the election doesn't go their way! Was it Lincoln or Shakespeare who said, "...Don't let the door knob hit you in the ass on the way out..."

Who do these people think they are? A few generations ago, they were known as vaudevillians.
